Editorial

By Maggie Thompson

Willford King of King's Komix Kastle (1706 N. 18th, Boise, ID 83702) wrote Nov. 3 to say, "Yes, your new print size is too small. This is an important issue with me. I've been reading The Buyer's Guide and Comics Buyer's Guide for many years and want to continue to read it. CBG provides me with important information relating to my collecting interests, as well as to my business interests."

I've just received an oral message from another staff member that he had heard indirectly from one other person who had said the typeface was too small.

That's only four people out of thousands. On the other hand, I've received no letters from people saying the typesize is just fine, thanks. (Maybe the typesize with the question has been too small for people to read to know that the question is being asked?)

Too big? (Hah.) Too small? (Vote count stands at four.) Just right? (No responses yet.) Let me know.

• As I clear my voice mail, I find message after message left in which the caller either assumes I have his phone number in my pocket (and, therefore, he doesn't leave his number at all) or he knows his own number so well he races through it when he gives it. "I'm at sevansee-ayfoteeni." On some numbers it's bad enough that the message simply can't be decoded.

Even if I've spoken to you dozens of times in the preceding month, please leave the number clearly. It may be the difference between my getting back to you right away and being delayed by days.

Please, too, leave more than your first name. I'm not going to bother to list all the Jims there are in the business, but you can probably work it out.

• Other phone tips:

Be aware that the phone companies are changing area codes like crazy; if you haven't spoken to an old friend in the last six months and assume you still know her number, you may be wrong. Be especially cautious if you're at one of those places that has an automatic redial on your fax machine. I often walk by fax machines that are whispering to themselves (since the volume is turned down here), "The number you have dialed has been changed." Since the person sending the fax had simply dialed the number he'd always used, set it on automatic, and then walked away, not only was the fax not going out, but the person sending it didn't know why it was not going out. (Obviously, this is more of a problem for big companies with lots of faxing than for folks with one fax at home.)

For folks with one fax at home, another problem has plagued us for years: people who use a single phone line for both phone and fax and have relatively inflexible equipment. Working professionals should seriously consider the added flexibility a second line confers: I can fax an urgent message to someone who is on the second leg of a two-hour phonecall with England. And a publisher with a job offer can do the same. (I can tell you from personal experience that five frustrated attempts to fax almost invariably lead to the decision to give up entirely and get other work done.)

On the other hand, I've recently had the pleasure of dealing with a few people who had some more recently developed phone-fax set-ups which really did seem to work with minimum hostility, if a single line is definitely preferable. (Charles Vess, what is the brand name of your switchable, one-phone-line fax? It's great.)

• Howie Gold of Chicago called about the editorial in #1148 in which I discussed the special Comics Want Lists section that runs in every CBG Price Guide. He said he'd looked up the ad in the supplement and thought the ad was clearer than my remarks. A sample listing showed a collector's name, address, and phone number, a line for the condition wanted, and a listing of six issues. Cost was $1 flat fee and $3 for the comic books he listed (50¢ per item listed): a total of $4. Take a look. (I hope I was clearer this time. Ads really aren't my department.)

• Hey, the market is going crazy, right? So what are you buying — and why?

Dear Valued ComiCovers® Customer:

I'm very pleased to announce the sale of my ComiCare® business, including ComiCovers® and ComiCards®, to Diamond Comics Distributors. The sale is effective immediately.

Since 1981 I've never wavered from the goal of providing top quality supplies at affordable prices. That's why ComiCovers® have always been manufactured in the United States. Sure, it was tempting to go off-shore, but I always refused. Even when the savings were enormous I never compromised. Besides the quality control issue, availability was the most important factor to retailers. I've sold over 750 million ComiCovers® because you could count on them being in stock and ready for shipping. Diamond's purchase ensures this uninterrupted supply continues in the future.

If you are a retailer, and you already have an account with Diamond, just call The Reorder Universe to order any ComiCare® products. If you need to open an account with Diamond, just call their customer service department at (410) 560-7100. It's that easy!

Thank you for all of your business over the years. Many of us grew our businesses together, with your weekly ComiCovers® order the link by which we communicated. I wish you all the very best during these changing times in the comics industry. Your friendship and trust are much appreciated.

Sincerely,

Gary

CHESTER GOULD

Chester Gould's Fillum Fables

Rare original panels from a pre-Dick Tracy Chester Gould strip and five other 1925 Chicago Tribune strips have been discovered and acquired by The College of Comic Book Knowledge comics shop.

Gould took over and briefly drew a strip called Fillum Fables for the Hearst syndicate before launching Dick Tracy. Art collector George Hagenauer said, "There are thousands of Dick Tracy originals out there, but in 25 years of collecting, I've only heard of one Fillum."

(The Fillum Fables strip was created as an imitation of Ed Wheelan's highly successful Minute Movies, which had been distributed by George Matthew Adams' syndicate since 1921.)

The Fillum Fables Gould original is from Dec. 26, 1925. Also discovered were original 1925 panels for Harold Gray's Nov. 20 Little Orphan Annie, Frank King's Dec. 11 Gasoline Alley, Frank Willard's Dec. 24 Moon Mullins, Sidney Smith's Nov. 20 The Gumps, and Carl Ed's Nov. 26 Harold Teen.

The strips had been given by the creators to a 12-year-old boy with polio who toured the Tribune offices around Christmas 1925. Each strip was inscribed to the boy, Frank La Breck, by the strip's artist. La Breck's son showed the strips to Comic Book College owner Ralph Johnson, who purchased them.

Johnson said, "With all the attention comic strips are receiving because of the centennial and the new postage stamps, we were lucky to find these at this time, especially the pre-Tracy Gould."

Fox will air live-action 'Generation X' movie

Generation X is being shot in Canada as a live-action TV-movie to air later this season on The Fox Tuesday Night Movie.

Matt Frewer, known for his roles on Max Headroom and Doctor, Doctor, plays a corporate maniac with a plan to manipulate society through mind control. Finola Hughes plays Emma (White Queen) Frost; Heather McComb plays Jubilation (Jubilee) Lee; Augustin Rodriguez plays Angelo (Skin) Espinosa; Jeremy Ratchford plays Sean (Banshee) Cassidy; Suzanne Davis plays Arlee (Buff) Hicks; Bumper Robinson plays "Mondo"; Randall Slavin plays Kurt (Refrax) Pastorius; and Amarilis plays Monet (M) St. Croix.

The film is directed by Jack Sholder from a script by Eric Blakeney and has started production in Vancouver, British Columbia.

The two-hour drama begins at the start of the comic-book series — with White Queen and Banshee welcoming a new generation of teen-age mutants to the Xavier Institute. The mutant freshmen must learn to harness their powers for the good of the world and to confront villains like Frewer's Russell Tresh.

Special effects have been designed to represent such mutant powers as Skin's six extra feet of stretchable flesh, Buff's out-of-control musculature, and Jubilee's energy-zapping fingertips. The story builds to a battle in a virtual dreamscape.

Generation X is an MT2 Services Production in association with Marvel Films and distributed by New World Entertainment. Stan Lee, Avi Arad, Bruce Sallan, and Eric Blakeney are executive producers, and David Roessell is producer.

The movie is not the first Fox show based on Marvel mutants. The X-Men animated series is now in its fourth season as part of Fox Children's Network's Saturday-morning programming.

Creator retires 'Calvin and Hobbes'

Bill Watterson, 38, will retire his Calvin and Hobbes comic strip Dec. 31, according to an Associated Press report published in the Nov. 10 Los Angeles Times.

According to the report, in a letter to newspaper editors, Watterson said, "I believe I've done what I can do within the constraints of daily deadlines and small panels. I am eager to work at a more thoughtful pace, with fewer artistic compromises."

Watterson also said in the letter that he had not decided what he will do next.

Marvel stock sinks

Marvel Entertainment's stock dropped to a 52-week low of 11 7/8 Nov. 10 following the announcement of disappointing third-quarter earnings.

Late Nov. 9, Marvel reported profits of $19.6 million (19¢ a share) on revenue of $269 million, compared with $22.6 million (22¢ a share) on revenue of $152 million in last year's third quarter.

In a release, Marvel said it expected its fourth quarter to repeat the same figures reported in last year's fourth quarter, when the company earned $14.5 million (14¢ a share).

Dow Jones reporter Michael Brown quoted Smith Barney Inc.analyst Jill Krutick as saying she was concerned about prospects for Marvel's sports-card and comic-book business, which yield about 40% of Marvel's revenues. Brown attributed Marvel's disappointing performance to lower demand for the company's comic books and the effects of a slow rebound in the sports-card business on Marvel's SkyBox.

Brown reported, "To bolster its publishing segment in the face of higher paper and printing costs, Marvel plans to reduce the number of its titles and to offer 99¢ comic books in the hopes of increasing readers."

Windsor-Smith heads roster at Mid-Ohio-Con

Other guests include Sergio Aragonés, Mark Beachum, Dick DeBartolo, Mark Evanier, Franchesco, Dick Giordano, Bob Ingersoll, Tony Isabella, Larry Marder, Sheldon Moldoff, George Pérez, Jim Shooter, Jeff Smith, and William Tucci. Ray Zone holds 3-D workshop in LA

3-D comic-book publisher and writer Ray Zone will present a 3-D slide show on "The History of 3-D Comic Books" at the Eagle Rock branch of the Los Angeles Public Library Nov. 21, 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Zone will also conduct a workshop on writing and illustrating comic books and demonstrate how a 3-D comic book is produced. Participants can bring writing and art samples for Zone to review. The Los Angeles Public Library in Eagle Rock is located at 5027 Caspar Blvd.

I would like to take this opportunity to publicly apologize to some of the artists whose work was featured in Shi/Cyblade: The Battle for Independents.

It has come to my attention that Kurt Busiek (Samaritan) and Jhonen Vasquez (Johnny the Homicidal Maniac) were not asked for permission to use their characters. For this I am truly sorry, but I want them to know that it was not intentional. My ultimate goal was to showcase as many independent creators as possible, hoping to generate more interest among fans.

Kurt, I have been an ardent admirer of yours for quite some time and meant only to pay homage to your enormous talent. I honestly thought I had secured your permission and meant no offense. Jhonen, your character is great, and I believe it fit very well in the story. Please believe I would never intentionally use someone's work without asking them first.

Chris Crosby also made us aware of two other errors: First, his name was misspelled Cosby; second, although we thought we were using his character, "Snap the Punk Turtle," it seems we in fact drew Snap's nephew, Victor P. Turtle. Again, Chris, my apologies. In the frenzy surrounding publication of this comic book, I guess we weren't as careful with our proofreading as we should have been.

In closing, I'd just like to say that Shi/Cyblade was a labor of love for me. I've received many letters from fans and retailers saying how enormously pleased they were with the project. Some of them were even able to name all 50 characters. And, although I said this before, it bears repeating: I'm deeply appreciative of all the creators for allowing me to feature their characters in what I hope will be an introduction for many fans to the wonderful world of independent comic books.

It's always troublesome when a comic-book retailer is faced with criminal charges over the way he or she conducts business.

Since our own Carnal Comics line publishes adult material, we carefully watch cases like the one in which Planet Comics of Oklahoma City is involved. While we, of course, encourage stores to carry material which caters to an older clientele, we also always recommend that retailers maintain a distinctly separate section of their store to display these items.

Not only should minors not have visual or physical access to adults-only comics, but the register clerks should be particularly mindful of checking IDs, as customers purchase these items, as well.

When I hear of a store arrested for selling adult material to minors, I have a big problem with granting assistance, even when my own comics are involved. I've been in stores where clearly adults-only comics are on open display, placed on the top shelves of the racks. These retailers think that, since minors are presumably too short to reach the comic books, only adults will be able to buy them. When this is the set-up which precipitates a bust, we can offer no sympathy or aid.

If, however, a store faces charges merely for carrying or selling adult material, and there's no possibility that the store displayed or sold such comics to minors, I'm ready to lend a hand in any way possible in that store's defense. Even if I'm not the publisher of any of the disputed "obscene" comics. As Peter David makes clear in CBG #1147, all comics readers have a stake in the outcome of such dangerous events.

Re-Visionary Press has, like many small publishers, suffered the double whammy of decreasing distribution outlets and skyrocketing printing costs. Since we don't currently have much in the way of cash to offer the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund, we'd like to offer an alternative to raise cash for Planet Comics' defense. Any CBG reader who donates $10 to the CBLDF and then sends Re-Visionary Press a photocopy of the canceled check will receive a free edition of Carnal Comics: True Stories of Adult Film Stars which will be autographed by the star herself. No limit on quantities: If someone donates $100, we'll send 10 free autographed editions.

If someone wants to make the CBLDF donation but isn't interested in receiving an adults-only comic book, we will gladly substitute a free copy of either Rock 'n' Roll Comics, Alternative Comics, or Women in Rock #1, instead (all-ages titles). Just specify your choice with the copy of the canceled check.

Best of luck to Michael Kennedy and John Hunter at Planet Comics, and thanks in advance to everyone who assists them in defending their rights.

CBG OH, SO?

Blair Kramer

I was livid when I read the news item regarding the Amazing Tales Comics store in Ashland, Ore., in CBG #1140. I am always angered by government censorship and theft. Any store owner would surely feel powerless when local authorities confiscate more than $10,000 worth of inventory. What can the comic-book industry do when government blatantly oversteps its bounds?

Perhaps a great deal more than you think. The vagaries of business and competition can cause a comic-book store to close its doors. That's life. However, it is intolerable when a store is threatened by official government theft. Amazing Tales Comics must not be allowed to close as a result of government action. Every comic-book publisher in this country should promise to replace each and every confiscated item for free. You're only hurting yourself if you decline to do so. Comic-book stores that experience legal theft by local authorities are liable to close as a result of missing inventory. Such an occurrence certainly cannot serve the needs of any publisher.

Spread the word. Publishers should immediate contact any store that has been raided. You must fight back!

Larry Hayes

Ashland, OR 97520

I am writing this letter in response to the news item in CBG #1140 regarding the seizure of comics and related materials at Amazing Tales Comics in August here in Ashland, Ore.

You always think, "it can't happen here" — but then it does, here: in a small town built around a college and a well-known Shakespeare festival, a town that is registered 60% Democrat and is the butt of jokes in the surrounding community for how liberal we are. When it happens to someone you know, then the ugly spectre of censorship becomes frighteningly real. I'm sure there will be more on this story to follow, so I'll try to keep my comments brief.

I have been a friend and customer of Eric Piper for several years, and this attack on his store, his name, and his livelihood sickens me. Eric had anything he considered questionable for younger readers kept behind the counter and for the most part out of sight. He only made the sale he did after being lied to about the age of the 17-year-old female sent to him in the sting operation. He was set up, plain and simple.

The vagueness of the definition used in the search warrant of what was obscene was so broad as to include anything which portrayed even partial nudity in any context. When asked what would definitely qualify as obscene, the police responded "erect nipples." I find this interesting, as I think of all the grocery-store magazines on display at a child's-eye level every day and what graces their covers. (Seen the Sports Illustrated swimsuit edition?)

Also ironic and telling in this story is that this operation is supposed to have started with a juvenile who somehow acquired a copy of Verotika, although no one at the store recalls the sale. When the police were looking for obscene material to confiscate, they looked at and declined to include the store copies of — you guessed it — Verotika.

Eric's name has been harmed; one local paper's headline read "Comic shop owner nailed in smut sting" and went on to print several errors in the body of the story. None of the calls placed to get a correction or retraction of errors were returned.

I don't know the economic impact of losing $10,000 worth of potential sales, except that Amazing Tales is a virtually one-man shop smaller than my combined living and dining rooms, and I'm sure it wasn't needed in the middle of a pretty tough environment for comics retailers in general.

Frank Miller is right about one thing: By self-segregating "adult" materials behind the counter, it tells the confiscators what to take, rather than affording any protection to the retailer. Why make it easier for these people?

Erik, hang in there. I hope your merchandise will be returned intact in timely fashion and you can get on with your business.

For me, I have decided that I will support as many efforts of the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund as I reasonably can, as in buying creators' works where some or all of the proceeds go to the fund.

I just got shown up close and personal why it's needed.

This isn't Orwell's 1984 or Wertham's 1954, but somehow I'm reminded of both.

In case anyone actually made it to the last page of the Comics Buyer's Guide Publishers Issue (#1138), I would like to correct an oversight on my part for the entry on WCG Comics, which was accompanied by the legend, "This company did not respond to requests for an update."

First of all, I want to apologize to the CBG (and those few proud, loyal readers of mine) for not responding. I remember receiving the request and, at the time, thinking, "Great, I have plenty of time to answer this!" and promptly having it disappear in the black hole of my response file. (Yeah, it's still in there.) For a tiny, self-publishing operation like mine, always on the lookout for opportunities like this to get the word out, it was irresponsible of me to let this slip through the cracks — but I'm a one-man operation, so there you go.

Anyway, allow me to update the info for you now:

Yes, WCG Comics is still in operation. Our current and only title is Adventure Strip Digest, a modern-day action-adventure series starring globe-trotting troubleshooter and private investigator Rob Hanes.

The series has been compared to Jonny Quest, Terry and the Pirates, and Indiana Jones. The series began in late 1994, and three issues have been published to date. Before that, the series was a fanzine comic book available only through direct mail, with many issues published under varying titles since 1992.

Adventure Strip Digest received a Xeric Foundation Grant for self-publishers earlier this year and was nominated for the 1995 Russ Manning Award for Most Promising Newcomer which was presented at the Will Eisner Awards Banquet at the San Diego Comic-Con this past July.

Upcoming projects include Adventure Strip Digest #4, which introduces stronger continuity for the series and our first major villain, and a possible trade paperback collection of all the older Rob Hanes stories (plus one new story) which were published before the series was turned into an independent comic book. Other products include an audiotape cassette "radio show" featuring Rob called "Three Days of the Fanboy," which was professionally recorded and mixed with actors, music, and sound effects. As this suggests, this has been a very good year for WCG, and I expect to build on this momentum in the coming year.

I'd also like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation to the organizers of the 1995 San Diego Comic-Con, who, again, did an extraordinary job in putting together a great show, particularly given the logistics involved. As an attendee for the past 10 years or so and an exhibitor the past three, I have been impressed by how much better (and more professional) the con seems to get every year. Their work this year was particularly impressive, because recent events in the industry seem to have put a damper to the field, but the con brought back, for me at least, the excitement and enthusiasm of the medium.

I would particularly like to thank Fae Desmond, Jackie Estrada, and the extraordinary staff of the Comic-Con (especially Eddie Ibrahim) for their great work. (Jackie also did a great job at the Eisners, which was very enjoyable and very professional. I'm glad my girlfriend forced me to bring a suit.) Relatively speaking, I was no doubt one of the smallest publishers there, but I still felt very connected and well taken care of throughout the show. The excitement in the Independent Publisher Pavilion area was particularly encouraging to see.

Thanks, too, to everyone who came by my table to express their support for my work on Adventure Strip Digest and independent comics in general, including fans, retailers, distributors, and fellow pros. I don't want to risk leaving anyone out in naming names, so suffice it to say: You know who you are.

I intend to repay all of you through more issues of my comic book.

Brad Winter
6031 Birchwood
Great Bend, KS 67530

I'm writing you with a 32¢ stamp to complain about a $6.95 comic book that has left me frustrated with a certain writer.

I am talking about my recently read copy of Sandman Midnight Theatre. I am incredibly frustrated with this piece of work. At first, I almost didn't buy the comic book. I mean, $6.95 is a lot of money for not a lot of comic book. But I bought it anyway, mostly for the reasons that I faithfully follow Sandman Mystery Theatre and that, of the few Sandman issues I've read, Neil Gaiman has proven to be an enjoyable writer. So I put my $6.95 worth of faith in Matt Wagner and Gaiman. And I feel ripped off.

I read Maggie's review in CBG, and, even though it was favorable, Maggie, you did mention that there was a whole sub-plot for Sandman readers only. That has got to be the reason so much of it didn't make sense for me. I cannot imagine what would've happened had someone picked it up who hadn't known either of the parties involved. They would surely have tossed it aside as rubbish. What probably frustrated me the most about this piece of work is Gaiman's selfishness.

Bet that threw you for a loop, so let me explain. Gaiman is a British writer, is he not? So he takes this opportunity to turn the New York Mystery Theatre into something familiar to him: England. So he ships Wesley Dodds to England. Isn't that convenient? From there — the dialogue has to be a breeze for Gaiman, I'm sure. Which really angers this culturally illiterate comics reader who does not understand British slang and lore. It made me feel real dumb. (In comparison to Mystery Theatre, which doesn't insult my intelligence.)

Another part of the story that was mystifying was introducing too many characters into too little space. And the thing that got me the most, as I'm sure is the case with many other readers, was the point that the two Sandmen only met for two pages. And DC advertising called this a team-up? That speaks for itself.

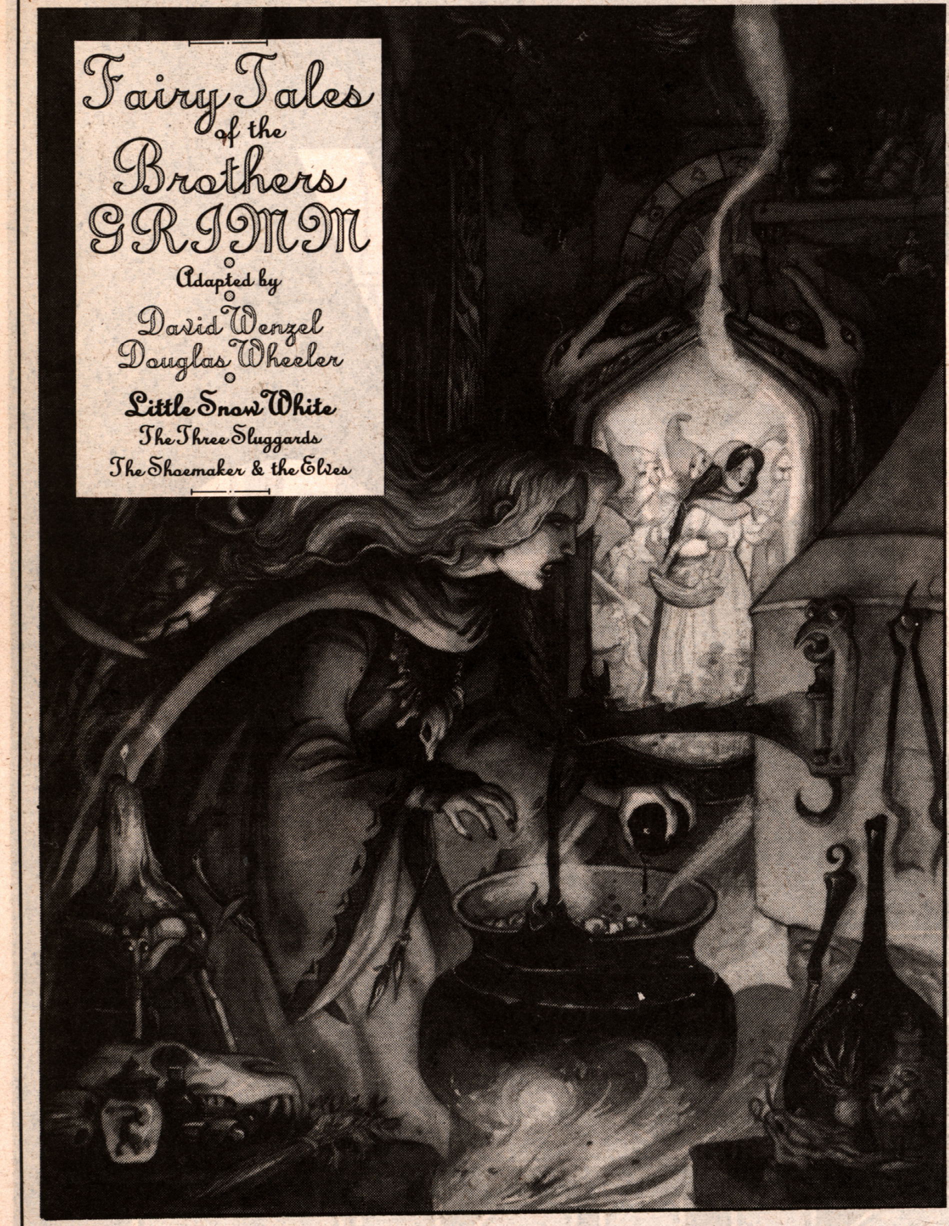
David Wenzel returns to comics!



LITTLE SNOW WHITE and other tales of the Brothers Grimm

David Wenzel · Doug Wheeler

Fondly remembered for his beautiful best-selling adaptation of "The Hobbit", Wenzel brings his stunning painting talents to the classic Grimm Fairy Tales "Little Snow White", "The Three Sluggards", and "The Shoemaker & The Elves". Doug Wheeler, known for his "Classics Desecrated", here takes a completely different tack: his script adaptations are the result of careful research through many classic renditions of these stories with the aim of complete authenticity. What comics fans might not know is that Wenzel is a well-known children's book illustrator as well with books at Little Brown, Random House, etc. This is presented just as Craig Russell's award-winning "Tales of Oscar Wilde" and, in the same way, is both for fans of great comic art and to read proudly to their children. More such collaborations can be expected in the future, creating a wonderful library of comics adaptations of fairy tales.

It's that time of year once again that I make my annual list of holiday gift ideas. Before I get started, I'd just like to say how disheartening it is for me to see people who take advantage of an opportunity like this, which celebrates the spirit of the holiday season, to shamelessly plug their own work. Anyway, I don't have your list of categories in front of me, so I'll have to wing it. Here we go:

For people who like gross-out cartoons: I recommend the Ren & Stimpy comic book from Marvel. It's written by me, mostly, and it's really funny.

For fans of country-western music, I recommend my Brooks & Dunn comic book which just came out. It's a good comic book to

by cat yronwode
BRUCE MESERVEY

THIS IS FIT TO PRINT NUMBER 546: It's been a while since i have reviewed a fanzine by Rodney Schroeter. Too long, actually. If he's been drawing them, he hasn't sent them my way.

Rodney was the author-artist of the very strange series The Weirdo. This amateur self-published zine (not to be confused with Robert Crumb's Weirdo, which, strangely, debuted the very same month) starred a costumed character who, well, who helped people and did good deeds.

The premise sounds simple, but there was a quirkiness in the execution which made reading The Weirdo a memorable experience. The art was never all that great, but there was true passion in the story telling. I still recall one vivid scene in which The Weirdo gave a limp, drowned cat artificial respiration by gently breathing into its tiny little mouth, and the funny thing is that i can see it in my mind's eye just as clearly as i can see Steve Ditko's Spider-man lifting the drippy-wet ten-ton doohickey off of himself or Will Eisner's Spirit striking a match in Dolan's darkened office as he prepares to relate the story of his lost love Sand or Milton Caniff's Terry standing toe to toe with Warlord Klang. Some things just stick with you. The Weirdo stuck with me.

Like i said, i haven't seen a new fanzine from Rodney Schroeter in a long time, but recently, Rodney has reappeared in my life via the internet. His newest fannish venture is a self-imposed electronic publishing project of considerable magnitude: he intends to review at length virtually every silent movie available on video. His new electronic series, Silent Reels, is as well written as in print on the subject but, quirky as always, Rodney makes it accessible via e-mail to anyone who asks to be put on his free mailing list.

"My goal in writing these columns is not a modest one. I intend to develop a significant interest, among people who enjoy good movies, in the silent era — an interest that will grow to such proportions that there will some day be a Silent Movie Channel, a special Silents section in the video rental shops, and film restoration will become a multi-billion dollar business (financed completely by the free market; I do not consider the arts a proper concern of the government).

"To write these columns, I intend to enjoy watching and re-watching a huge number of good films. In the course of my writing and viewing, I intend to take pleasure in learning about actors and other movie-makers of the silents.

"I am not an authority on silent movie history, but I plan to become one.

"As I see it, this will be a life-long project, though I doubt it will ever become a full-time one."

True to his word, Rodney is not only working his way through the canon of silent classics by the likes of Buster Keaton and Douglas Fairbanks; he is also paying attention to less fannishly-popular films, such as the romantically realistic Sunrise (1927), directed by F. W. Murnau, and starring George O'Brien, Janet Gaynor, and Margaret Livingston. (If you've never seen Sunrise, check out Rodney's review and then rent or buy it for yourself; it is all he says it is and more and Gaynor won an Academy Award for her work in this and two other movies [Best Actor and Actress Awards were not given for single film roles in the early days of the Academy].)

Rodney doesn't merely play back the high spots of Sunrise — or The Man Who Laughs or The Cat and the Canary or The General , or any of the other silents he has covered to date. His greatest strength as a writer may be that he subjects the movies to a deep scrutiny that is fueled in part by his own interest in the philosophy of Ayn Rand. In addition to analyzing direction techniques, plot, acting, and emotional impact, he provides background detail on the cast and crew, recommends further reading, and lists video sources.

(Oh — and those who are obsessed with spoilers needn't worry; Rodney never gives away the endings.)

Q's & A's Capital City Distribution answers retailer questions.

The pace of change in the comics industry has been dizzying this year. Distribution to comic stores has been turned upside down. At Capital, it's been no different - we've been changing too. And we know you've got questions about these changes. So here are the top eight questions we've been hearing, and the answers you need.

Why should I order from Capital?

Because Capital has the growth products that can help your store thrive in a declining market - cool products that help make your store the cool place to go. Our exclusive lines lead the way - independent comics and graphic novels from Kitchen Sink and Coppervale, among others; anime videos and manga from Viz; games from TSR, the leader in role-playing games; top-quality prints from 1000 Editions; and more. Capital is also known as having the best line of anime videos and Japanese comics, as the number one distributor in Star Wars and Star Trek merchandise, as a key supplier of games and cards, as the place to get the broadest line of independent comics, and as the place to find the next hot product when the last one is cooling off. If you don't buy from Capital, you're missing your chance at the future.

What are Capital's minimums?

We know that you've had a hard time lately juggling three order forms every month, figuring out discounts and meeting minimum orders. That's why Capital has taken another step to make it easier for you by introducing the "no minimum" minimum order. You decide what your minimum advance order will be. We're confident that once you order from Capital, our superior service and products will get you to buy from us again. And, as always, backlist orders through Reorderlink service can be any size, with free freight over $100 wholesale.

How are Capital's prices better?

At Capital, each retailer gets the maximum discount, whether you buy one product or a ton. In the old world of distribution to comic stories, it made sense for discounts to be based on total order amount. In the new world, forget it - you've got to buy from multiple distributors, so it's harder to build up big orders with any one. At Capital you get the maximum discount for each product no matter how many - or how few - items you buy, whether it's 55% off TSR games, 50% off on Viz or Kitchen Sink Comics, or 50% off on many of the non-exclusive products Capital offers. And if you compare Capital's prices on products vs. the other major distributor you'll find Capital is a place to improve margins in your store. For January shipping products, for example, most retailers get better across-the-board pricing for the 93 comic lines both distributors carried, due to Capital's maximum discount. Even for the very largest customers, Capital had significantly better pricing on 79 comic lines both distributors carried, the same pricing on 12 comic lines both distributors carried, and higher pricing on only 2 comic lines both distributors carried.

Who takes care of me at Capital?

At Capital, each customer is assigned a personal representative that can handle all of your service needs, from placing orders, to questions about shipping, to solving problems, to authorizing returns. All your (domestic) calls are free, and our customer service people know what they're doing and care about you. We know that having a good customer service rep can make the difference between a good day and a bad day for you, and we're committed to making every day with Capital a good day. We've also got a field force of sales reps that visit your store to take care of business face to face.

NEW! How does Capital ship?

Starting the week of November 20th, our standard service provides one shipment a week. On Tuesday (by end of the day), you'll get your exclusive titles, your Ronalds products and all other products via UPS. We'll also do periodic picks of special hot products for delivery on Friday.

What about freight charges?

After a lot of consideration, we've come up with a very simple freight charge system - you pay the same low amount every week.

Based on your total advance order for the month in retail dollars (retail dollars + net-priced items):

Monthy Order	Weekly Freight Charge
Up to $1,000	$10 per week
$1,000 to $3,499	$20 per week
$3,500 to $7,499	$25 per week
$7,500 to $19,999	$30 per week
Over $20,000	Free freight

How is Capital different from other distributors?

One of the big differences between Capital and Heroes World or Diamond is that we're not owned, controlled, or about to be owned by a faceless corporation that tells us what to do. We listen to our customers instead. Place a vote with your dollars for the distributor that cares about retailers first - order from Capital.

How do I get started?

It's easy. Just call our toll-free number and ask for New Accounts (press the #2 key). Our special New Accounts reps will check your retailer status, get you set up with an account number, set you up with your personal customer service representative, and help you get your credit and collections status set. They can also answer any questions you have about how to order form Capital. Remember - we're working for you!

Call Capital today at (800) 546-5467 or (608) 223-2000.

CBG OH, SO?

read while you're country line-dancing.

For people who like to kick stuff, I recommend the Mighty Morphin' Power Rangers comic book from Marvel. It's filled with page after page of people kicking stuff. I'm one of the primary writers for MMPR, but that in no way influences my inclusion of it here, you can be assured.

For people who like funny little books about show business: Well, my next book, How to Be a Hollywood Celebrity, doesn't come out until May '96, so I can't really recommend that yet.

Oh, well — guess I'll stick with old reliable: You can't go wrong with a copy of my first book, Everything I Really Need to Know I Learned from Television (Applause Books, $7.95). I did that book with Rick Parker before he became a superstar for his work on Beavis & Butt-Head. Here's a chance for B & B fans to see some of Rick's early work, which is as twisted and hilarious as the work he is doing today.

That's about it for this year's gift list. Hope I got those categories right. In closing, my holiday wish for the new year is this: an end to shameless self-promotion everywhere.

Richard So
Zapp! Comics
574 Valley Rd.
Wayne, NJ 07470

Dear Publishers:

I am an employee of a moderate-sized chain of comics stores in New Jersey. The store at which I am employed, Zapp! Comics, specializes in mainstream comics catering to teen-age readers. However, I am a reader and firm supporter of independent comics and I have habitually harassed my employer (the owner of the chain) to carry small-press comics.

Unfortunately, the few times he does order such titles as Thieves and Kings, THB, or Strangers in Paradise, they sell poorly, being ignored in favor of the mass quantities of flashy, color, corporate comics such as X-Men and Batman. This poor sales record, I have concluded, is not the fault of the comics, but, rather, the poor conditions under which the comics were sold.

It is obvious that, with the success of such stores as Star Clipper and Page 45, independent comics sell well if placed in the right position and circumstances.

I have presented this logic to my employer, and he agrees (being a supporter of quality comics). Therefore, he has offered me the following proposal: He will give me two months to prepare my own corner of the store to sell and advertise the comics of my choice.

This section will be entirely separate from the rest of the store. Letting me order a total of 30 comics (plus back issues and graphic novels) from Previews, he will let me sell the comics of my choice in the way I want to sell them. The section will be completely dedicated to independent comics. The comics you publish must represent the best this medium has to offer. I have three to five months to make this idea work and I must have a sell-through of 70% to 75% to be successful. If I am able to do this, the section will remain and expand. If not, the section will close, and, most likely, my employer will be less inclined to order independent comics.

I believe this section is a great opportunity to expand the interest of comics readers; it will be introducing new, original comics to eager readers. This, I believe, is the ultimate goal of independent comics: to prove that there exists a comic book for every person and to lift the current market beyond the stereotypical super-hero mode.

However, pulling this off will be very difficult. I am faced with masses of long-time super-hero readers not inclined to expand their literary horizons. I need help. Whatever aid or support you can give to post in the store will be incredibly appreciated. I need to promote this section properly or it will be ignored. If I do it correctly, I feel I can draw large amounts of attention to this section. Whatever you want to send — posters, pamphlets, freebies, advice, anything — will be appreciated. I need as much help as I can, since no support whatsoever is being offered from anyone.

I truly love and respect the comics medium. An artform unlike any other, it is still in the early stages. The last thing I wish to see is this great medium ruined by corporate-driven crud. To survive and expand, this medium must break out of its ancient mold of super-heroes to truly gain acceptance in the mainstream of culture and to appeal to all people.

I feel this project is a step in the right direction. If it succeeds, it will be passed on to the entire chain and influence other comics stores. Many stores that only sell high-quality, thoughtful, diverse comics will undoubtedly change the market for good.

This is my cause. Please lend your support and send advice or product to the above address. Thank you.

IADD put on hiatus

The International Association for Direct Distribution has been put on hiatus, according to IADD spokesperson Tim Wallace. "Our mission no longer applies in the current conditions," Wallace said, adding that membership had fallen after the recent changes in the direct market, with three distributors going out of business and others switching their primary products to something other than comics. The IADD no longer has any active programs and the group's annual conference has been canceled.

POV
POINT OF VIEW
BY Mark EVANIER

All right, I'll give you a choice this week. I can either write a 100,000 word POV all about popular misconceptions in the annals of staple-removers and I'll work in some silly analogies with proper names and I'll name-drop a lot — or I can print more of my old messages from computer bulletin boards. What's it gonna be? OK, you got it.

- A friend of mine used to have a piece of kinescope of an appearance that Carl Reiner made on The Tonight Show around 1964 or so. Johnny Carson asked him who the funniest person he'd ever met was, and Reiner answered, "I have to say two names. One is Mel Brooks, and the other is Albert Einstein." Everyone expected the answer of Mel Brooks and laughed at the mention of Einstein.

But then Reiner explained that Albert Einstein was the legal name of the son of comedian Harry Einstein. Albert was a friend of Carl's son Rob and used to hang around the house all the time, and Carl thought the kid was the funniest person he'd ever met. Shortly after this, Albert Einstein changed his last name to Brooks and started performing and writing. Reiner wasn't far off, was he?

- I have a sketchbook that I pass around to artist friends to draw in. (Actually, I have a couple, including the infamous "Dirty Book." But this story is about one of the clean volumes.)

One time, I sent the book to my chum, Russell (Broom-Hilda) Myers, who lives in Oregon. When the book came back, there was a note in it from Russ: "Thanks for the honor of drawing in this book.Unfortunately, while it was here, some old cartoonist who was visiting me grabbed it and, before I could stop him, insisted on drawing in it. He's some obscure old guy — I never heard of him — and I hope you can just razor the page out."

I opened the book, and there, on the page after Russell's drawing, was a color sketch of Donald Duck by some guy named Barks.

I didn't razor it out.

- Evanier's Fourth Law of the Comic-Book Business: Any time a comic-book company falls behind in payments to writers and artists who work for it, said company is not long for the world.

- You know, I've written some things about bad inkers in comics and seen some folks get very mad at certain people for committing the felony of doing poor ink work on Jack Kirby or Curt Swan or some other artist.

Maybe we ought to all remember that no editor assigns inking work at gunpoint. Your pet "bad inker" did not force his way into the comic-book company's offices at night, grab the pages, and rush home to ruin them. Some editor picked him for the task.

And, what's more, when he handed in issue #241 with the inking you so loathe, that editor gave the guy #242 to ink. And then #243 and so on, knowing full well what the results would look like.

With one or two exceptions, every inking job I've ever thought really poor in comics was a case of (a) a horrendous mismatch of penciller and inker, (b) an inker being handed something with an impossible deadline, and/or (c) an inker who just plain wasn't very good.

- Obviously the first case is the fault of whoever made the match. Neal Adams is one of the best pencillers who ever worked in comics and Joe Sinnott is one of the best inkers, but I thought that their two-time collaboration on Thor was a case of two guys working at cross-purposes. They went together like Haagen-Dazs ice cream and Paul Newman spaghetti sauce.

The second case is often the editor's fault, even if the other free-lancers messed up, for not allowing a little "pad" in the schedule. One of the many skills that a good editor possesses is a pragmatic sense of schedule, the sense to plot the production of a comic book so that everything doesn't go septic, if the penciller gets the flu or the letterer's mother passes away. When this happens — or when someone in the office screws up — it is usually the poor inker who is expected to make up for everyone's lateness and not only get the book done in time but fix drawing errors that have crept in due to his predecessors' problems.

And, atop all of this, the inker is often the person blamed when an issue is late. In at least one case that I know of, the editor of a comic book botched the schedule, got the issue to the inker horrendously late, and expected the inker to do the impossible. When the inker only did the semi-impossible and the title shipped slightly tardily, the editor broadcast all over the office that the inker was irresponsible and late, the better to divert blame from himself.

As for the third case: Well, if you keep sending your shirts to a bad laundry and it keeps ruining them, whose fault is that? I don't want to fault editors for everything — and, in truth, it often isn't the person with the title of "editor" who makes the art assignments — but most comics artists are pretty consistent. Editors who give them work usually get exactly what they should have expected.

It's no secret that I have never cared much for the work of the late Vince Colletta, but I think it's silly to condemn the guy because he kept inking like Vince Colletta. Somebody gave him the work. Someone was satisfied with it.

Fill in the blank:

- The funniest people Carl Reiner has ever met are Mel Brooks and ____.
- Neal Adams and Joe Sinnott go together like Haagen-Dazs and _____.
- According to Evanier's Fourth Law of the Comic-Book Business, a company is not long for the world if _____.

What they didn't give him, for most of his career, was a lot of time or a lot of money. A dilemma which faces many an artist (not just inkers) is this: The company pays poorly. You want to do your best work but you don't want to be a chump and endorse the notion that it can get adequate work for bad money. Colletta, to his credit, had no illusions that he was doing magnificent work, at least the one time we conversed. But he believed he was giving his employers more quality than he was being paid for, and I'm not sure he was wrong. He also saved a lot of deadline schedules and a good many careers by inking whole issues in two days.

A comic book inked by anyone in two days is probably not going to look great, but, with Colletta, they usually looked a lot better than they would have with a so-called "top" inker given the same time constraints. In fact, many of the best guys couldn't ink a comic book at all in two days, let alone ink it adequately.

[From a later message, replying to a reply to the above:] We used to have a kid in our old comic-book club who thought that Johnny Romita had to be the most conceited, arrogant person in the world.

(This is John Romita Sr. of whom I speak, for those who have never had the pleasure of meeting one of the nicest gents in our industry. I think he's a terrific artist and I wish that he'd do more drawing and less office-type work; he always had a wonderful ability, refined in his romance-comics days, to draw very realistic, human people, including the sexiest girls in comics. To this, he applied the dynamism necessary to do super-hero stories, a hat trick not mastered by everyone who ever drew love comics. He's one of my favorite artists and he's still as good as ever. But what you have to know for this anecdote is that accusing him of conceit is like telling Susan Powter she needs a haircut.)

"What do you mean?" we all asked this kid who thought Romita was this haughty monster.

He explained that he had noticed all the times in a Marvel comic book or on a cover where a good eye could see that art had been retouched by Romita. It happened a lot around this time (1969-1970) and it may well have happened more than it should have. You could open almost any Marvel of the time and find a head or two redrawn by Romita. (Marie Severin and Herb Trimpe both occasionally did retouch work, as well.)

Those were, of course, executed on editorial order, and most of the artists were probably just as happy to have someone in the office do it as see the work returned to them for redraws. Still, this one kid thought that, every time an art job was turned in to Marvel, Romita would grab it out of someone's hands and go, "Lemme see that!" And, no matter whose art it was, or what was on the page, he'd yell, "This stinks! I can draw better than this!"

The young man proceeded to do an impression of how he imagined Romita, sitting at his board, "improving" everyone's pages, shouting, "I can draw better than Neal Adams! I can draw better than John Buscema!" Then he'd leap up on his drawing board, pound his chest like Tarzan, and bellow, "I can draw better than anyone!"

We patiently explained to the guy that this was not the case, that art fixes were done for all sorts of reasons — some technical, some creative — but always at the direction of an editor. They definitely did not mean that the retoucher thought he was better than the artist he was retouching. (Most of those artists had no greater fan or friend than John Romita.)

And, as far as I'm concerned, if he did think he could draw better than anyone, he wouldn't be that far wrong.

- One of my favorite "interesting figures" in comic-book history is Richard E. Hughes, the editor (and, for most of its existence, the entire writing staff) of the American Comics Group company. ACG published, among very few others, Adventures into the Unknown and Forbidden Worlds, the latter being the birthplace of The Fat Fury known as Herbie Popnecker.

Herbie was probably Hughes' happiest accident. He would often and unabashedly recycle old plots, occasionally pausing in a letters page to compare the latest version of a plot with the variation he had done four years before.

About as often as the swallows return to Capistrano, he did a tale about a little nebbish whose life is changed when he meets aliens or ghosts. The nebbish always changed, even if the plot didn't, but, this one time, the nebbish was uncommonly funny, and his life remained unchanged at story's end.

"Shane O'Shea," who was credited for writing the Herbie comics, was a pen name for Hughes. If you look at other ACG comics, you'll see writing credits for Ace Aquila, Greg Olivetti, Zev Zimmer, Kurato Osaki, Pierce Rand, and about 15 others: all Hughes. I always assumed Olivetti was named after his typewriter.

But he was all those people, making ACG's letters columns a hoot when he would (in seeming earnest) debate with readers as to whether Kurato Osaki was better at certain kinds of stories than Ace Aquila. Then there was the time that Shane O'Shea got ill, and Richard E. Hughes filled in for him on a Magicman script, and, then, months and months of letters were printed from readers complaining that Hughes had fallen far short of the O'Shea standard. He also, obviously, wrote any letter not printed with a full address. He sometimes heckled himself that way, writing himself what he called "crank letters." They seemed to spur real readers into writing to defend him.

I had a nice correspondence with Hughes late in his life, when ACG had suspended all its titles. He was writing some stuff for DC (including Hawkman) and he'd relocated some of the ACG overstock to DC's Strange Adventures. He was still running ACG's "other" comics division, producing commercial/educational comics pamphlets, nursing a dream to get Herbie resurrected in some format. Sadly, he didn't live to see that happen.

- A few years ago, The Comics Journal arranged, recorded, and published a group discussion of comic-book writers, and I was included. Others on the dais were so passionate about a few of the topics that I got about 11 words in.

At one point, I started to make a point, and someone interrupted, and I never got to deliver the punchline. I'd like to do so now, something like a dozen years after the fact.

I said, approximately, "You know what one of the great lies of the 20th century is? It's the old H.L. Mencken line about how no one ever went broke underestimating the taste of the American people."

I said it, then someone cut in and started rebutting without letting me finish my paragraph. He obviously thought, wrongly, I was going to say that, in the long run, the good stuff wins out and rises to the top. Even I've never believed that and I've believed a lot of silly things. What I would have added, had I had the chance, was: "Mencken was wrong. A lot of people have gone broke underestimating the taste of the American people."

Every time some bad book tops the bestsellers list or some dreadful TV show alights atop the Nielsens, folks haul out Mencken's line and damn us all with it. (Actually, they get it wrong and, half the time, attribute it to P.T. Barnum, anyway. What Mencken actually wrote was, "No man ever went broke underestimating the intelligence of the American voter." How much did Michael Huffington spend on the Senate race in California?)

I wish the folks who invoke the line would take a look at the bottom of the Nielsens and some of the books that never got near the bestsellers list. Yeah, there may be some quality there, but there's always a lot more of the rotten stuff.

I've seen a lot of movies that were so poor they couldn't even get distribution (I have cable), and the best thing you can say about most of them is that they're no worse than some that did. I doubt there are many cinema classics languishing completed on shelves.

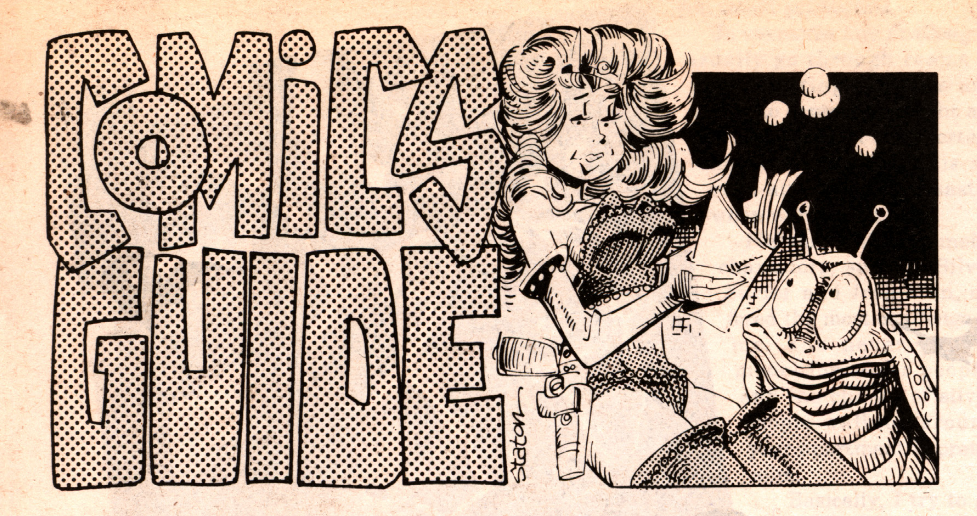
Same with comic books. Next time a title you think is wonderful gets canceled, take a look at the full list of cancellations. Some of it may good, but I'll wager that the titles you think are dreck vastly outnumber the ones you think are fab.

There are a lot of reasons good stuff sometimes flops and bad stuff sometimes succeeds. Sometimes the latter has come along at just the right moment. Sometimes it strikes a strange chord in folks. Sometimes the former is mismerchandised, mispromoted, or just plain mistimed for the marketplace. The Mencken line, even the misquote of it, even if we take it literally, vastly oversimplifies a very complex situation. Make a movie predicated on the assumption that the American people are morons and you could easily lose your shirt, pants, socks, and undies.

At times, I almost wish it were true. It would sure make writing a lot easier.

Mark Evanier continues, however, to underestimate how many ways he can say here that his address is 363 S. Fairfax Ave., #303, Los Angeles, CA 90036.

What are the Secrets of the Batcave™?



I slowly withdrew from the entanglement a flat, stuffed, cutout figure made of colored oilcloth. It stood approximately 12 inches high. For a long moment, this strange apparition and I confronted each other without a spark of recognition. Dusty, a bit faded, a little round oilcloth man wearing a derby and sporting a ragged mustache and a potbelly, he smiled enigmatically over my shoulder toward the kitchen. Somehow he looked familiar, and yet ... Then, from some far-off rubbish heap of memory, I heard a voice, a cracked, comical voice on the radio, asking, beseeching, demanding, wheedling, whimpering for more hamburgers. My God! Hurray! It's my Wimpy doll!

It will surprise many historians to learn that at one point in American history there was actually a Popeye radio program. Popeye, Olive and Castor Oyl, Ham Gravy, Wimpy and the whole crowd came into the living room every day. They offered you a choice of a Wimpy doll, a Popeye doll, an Olive Oyl doll or an Alice the Goon doll if you ate enough soup and sent in the labels. We were a canned-soup family, so there was no problem collecting enough labels, but I was probably the only kid in the United States who didn't order a Popeye doll; I went for Wimpy, a down-at-the-heels moocher who lived only to stuff his gut with hamburgers. I identified with him; and I'll never forget the day my Wimpy doll arrived. He immediately outranked [my teddy bear] Brownie; and for one hectic era, I was one of the very few Americans who went to bed every night with a guy wearing a derby and smoking a cigar. I must admit I was glad to see the old freeloader again. His oilcloth was a little seedy; the stuffing was edging out of his frock coat, but somehow that was as it should be for Wimpy.

Once again, I'm including a chart showing interest in recent titles as reflected in shop sales. I still can't cover more than a tiny fraction of current comics output in my reviews, so you can consider the chart something in the nature of a national "review" board. Have you been taking a look at each of these? (The list also lets you gauge the top seller for each represented publisher — which may let you guess what titles each may be spinning off soon.)

- DC sent a slew of photocopies of upcoming titles, and I surprised myself by liking all of them.

The one I found hardest to follow was the next mini-series by Elaine Lee, Vamps: Hollywood & Vein, a six-parter, not for children, and illustrated by William Simpson, scheduled to begin shipping Dec. 12 at $2.25. The five vampire, bike-riding women are in Hollywood, where Mink wants to star in a vampire movie. "By the end of the series," says DC promo material, "one of the Vamps will meet her own true death."

Lee is having fun with the world of Hollywood and vampire movies — and, for that matter, such phenomena as modern modern art. She's also exanding on the vampire mythos as it operates in her universe. The biggest problem is that the five (Screech, Howler, Whipsnake, Skeeter, and Mink) don't really come across to me as different from each other in appearance or action — though Lee is careful to identify each at the opening (in an excellent title page). Maybe I'll follow it better when the Vamps become a foursome.

- Batman: Legends of the Dark Knight #80 is the first part of the three-part "Idols" story written by James Vance, pencilled by Dougie Braithwaite, and inked by Sean Hardy. It's scheduled to ship Dec. 26 for $1.95. A serial killer is at large "while opportunists begin to capitalize on the legend of the Dark Knight." Intriguing art (no script was provided).

- Batman: Dark Allegiances is an Elseworlds story that (thank goodness) doesn't spend all (or even much) of its time retelling the minor variations of yet another origin of Batman. This is clearly focused on an alternate universe and an alternate Batman — and a clear-cut story involving that Batman fighting home-front American fascism, as Hitler gains power in Europe. It looks (from this first half of the 64-page one-shot) as though this will be an excellent, stand-alone episode with a beginning, middle, and end — with the confident art and powerful storytelling of Howard Chaykin at his best. (And when he's at his best, there are few better.) It ships Dec. 5 for $5.95.

- Green Arrow #105 is written by Chuck Dixon, pencilled by Rodolfo Damaggio, and inked by Robert Campanella; it ships Dec. 5 at $2.25 — as Dixon teams Robin with the new Green Arrow. Both teams (creative and characters) work smoothly together. Nice exchanges between Green Arrow and Robin make the reader want to see more.

- Firebrand #1 begins the ongoing monthly series on Dec. 5, priced at $1.75. It's written by Brian Augustyn and drawn by Sal Velluto — and our hero is a cyborg who still hasn't figured out all his powers and problems by the end of the first issue. This story provides a blend of gutsy action, tormented self-doubt, super powers, and secret manipulators. "A hard-edged avenger driven by old ghosts to make a difference in a city plummeting into chaos ... lives by one rule ... "No one dies on my watch." Excellently done so far.

- Speaking of excellence, I now have the actual releases of all three versions of Andrew Vachss' Batman: The Ultimate Evil and can, frankly, recommend any of the three you might be interested in. First, I heard the audiotape version ($17) from Warner Bros. and reviewed that on page GS10 of CBG #1148. Now I have the $19.95 hardcover (1995, Warner Books, ISBN 0-446-51912-X) of the novel and the trade-paperback-format comic book (first of two parts) (1995, DC, $5.95).

Obviously, the most economical way to get the story is in the comic-book format — and you get the bonus of pencils by Denys Cowan and inks by Prentis Rollins. (Script is by Neal Barrett Jr. from Vachss' novel.)

Frankly, I thought the best format for this might be the audiotape, because a lot of the story involves lengthy explanations of background and phenomena, rather than action. (That's not to say there's not action, but I had a hard time working out how the artist would be able to keep the story visually exciting in all the scenes.) Now that I have all three, I frankly find each to have merits enough to stand on its own. No matter how its audience comes to the story, Batman: The Ultimate Evil is a powerful indictment of the forces that permit children to be victims. Moreover, cloaking his message in the form of entertainment, Vachss may be able to reach — and affect — his widest audience yet. Your friends only like books without pictures? Give them the novel. Busy commuters want something to listen to while they're traveling? Give them the tapes. Want a terrific comic book? Buy the two-parter. Women will find strong, admirable female characters in this, by the way.

Whether you know it or not, there is actually a tourist trade for child abusers. Don't buy imports from Thailand. Do buy The Ultimate Evil. (A John Ostrander Batman story helped get legislation enacted which made it more difficult for gangs to buy guns in bulk. Perhaps this Batman story will have its own effect. You owe it to yourself to get this.

High Impact hits with 'DOUBLE IMPACT'

Double Impact was born in January, when High Impact Studios in Miami, Fla., put together a story starring two exotic women.

There were three people who made up High Impact: Publisher John Ulloa, Promotions and Business Affairs Director Jason Kolodny, and creator Ricky Carralero. They had a lot of work to do with almost no financial backing.

"It was decided to do a full wraparound chromium cover and go from black and white to full color," Kolodny said, "Of course, we had no idea what we were getting ourselves into and suffered from a series of ups and downs with a previous partner.

"We put away all the garbage and went full-speed ahead."

How did they do it?

Kolodny said, "We were on our own, so Ricky and John went to their families. After a lot of tears and bad nights, more than $50,000 was finally put together."

High Impact Studios released Double Impact #1 in March, and Kolodny said the company sold 48,750 copies in less than a month, even though the team was not happy with the printing quality of the first edition. "The comic book sold out, we got swamped by re-orders, and happy fans were asking for more.

In the eight months since the first issue of Double Impact was released, the company has received increasing industry attention. Its plans for next year includes a Comic Images card set, according to Kolodny: "One of the most provocative chromium sets ever done, it will feature the exotic work of Ricky Carralero. There will also be guest appearances by some of the hottest big-name artists in the industry."

Comic Images is also scheduled to release T-shirts, PVC figures, calendars, and pins. Claymoore Productions is scheduled to release a line of Carralero's exotic female characters sculpted by Clay Moore: Jazz, China, and others will appear as 9" figures.

titles in March. The first is Jazz, a solo adventure starring that character

Carralero said, "The Jazz is my baby character, and this book is going to kick some serious butt."

The second title will be Blondage. "Our two blonde babes are going solo in their own comic book," Kolodny said, "and, next, the sky is the limit." In the company's plans are an animated film and variants for yet another series.

Kolodny provided the following question-and-answer session with Carralero:

Kolodny: Ricky, when you were growing up, which comic books did you like to read?

Carralero: I don't remember reading any comics, but I did collect them for their art. Later, when I started reading them, I got into X-Men and got hooked on Heavy Metal, Epics, and other major independents.

Kolodny: What artists influenced you to stay with your talent and create what you have today, and whom do you admire in the comics industry?

Carralero: I would have to say in the early '80s it was Art Adams (he was drawing the X-Men titles), and then it was John Byrne with Alpha Flight. I admire Jim Lee and Marc Silvestri.

Kolodny: How did the concepts of Double Impact and Blondage come about? Will the Bad Girl craze will be around for another year?

Carralero: I used to work with live models so I am very comfortable drawing women and the female anatomy. When I decided to do Double Impact, no one at that time had two female characters who were brunettes and were hot, sexy, and had two big guns.

Blondage was born after I got tons of fan mail including a picture I received from a blonde fan who showed me that blondes have fun, too.

What I think about the Bad Girl situation is that, if you have a good storyline and beautiful art — and you can quote me on this — "T and A will always sell."

Kolodny: Where do you think High Impact Studios will be two years from now?

Carralero: Isn't that the same question everybody asks? The sky.

Kolodny: Your work has been compared to Olivia's. how do you feel about that?

Carralero: She is not only one of my greatest mentors, there are a lot of her influences in my work. I think what people see is that we both chose one of the most precious things to illustrate: the female body.

Event announces upcoming 'Events'

By Kim "Howard" Johnson
Promotions and Marketing Director

Ash #1, the first release from Event Comics, shipped in November 1994, but the company's founders had first discussed it nearly a year earlier.

Penciller Joe Quesada and inker Jimmy Palmiotti had often talked of doing more work together.

The pair had worked together on several high-profile projects, including X-O Manowar #0 and Ninjak #1-3 for Valiant. Laurie Bradach was working as Joe Quesada's agent after she co-founded 23rd Century Artworks, an original comic-book art gallery in Chicago.

With Bradach's encouragement, Quesada and Palmiotti began discussing characters and ideas for their first creator-owned title in late 1993 and came up with the idea for a super-hero based on a real-life hero: a firefighter.

Bradach began organizing the legal and business arrangements that would be necessary for a new publishing enterprise, while Quesada and Palmiotti began developing characters and plotting.

Everything came together during a week-long business meeting in Key West, Fla., in spring 1994.

Event Comics, co-owned by the three partners, was formed to publish Quesada and Palmiotti's creation: Ash. It was decided to concentrate on one bimonthly title for the first year.

Letterer Chris Eliopoulos, colorist Reuben Rude, Juan Campbell and the Quebecor printing team, graphics consultant Wally McCormack, and marketing director Kim "Howard" Johnson rounded out the company's production team.

Event Comics and Ash were announced at the 1994 Chicago Comicon and the San Diego Comic-Con, with the first issue solicited for November release.

Bradach said, "Ash #1 was released in late November 1994, and fan and retailer response to the story, art, characters, and the entire package in general was overwhelmingly positive."

In that first issue, fireman Ashley Quinn was trapped in a burning building and miraculously survived, only to transform into a fiery super-being.

Bradach said that readers were absorbed by the real-life heroism of Ashley Quinn and his fellow firemen, as well as the super-hero known as Ash.

Quinn's first super-adventure ended in an unexpected manner in the second issue, as the cast of characters expanded.

One of the bonus features of Ash is the guest pin-up in each issue.

Artists who have contributed include Barry Windsor-Smith, Mike Mignola, Geof Darrow, and Jim Lee.

A painted cover by Tim and Greg Hildebrandt — one of two covers for Ash #5 — also introduced the Hildebrandt's first creator-owned character, Covenant.

The Hildebrandts wrote and fully painted each illustration of Covenant, which was then added to all the other character and story art by Palmiotti and Quesada.

Event is celebrating the conclusion of its first story arc with the release of Ash #0, which immediately follows issue #6.

Event initially refused all outside attempts to license Ash, while producing a poster, a limited-edition lithograph, and a T-shirt available only at conventions.

Recently, Comic Images licensed an Ash T-shirt, and Dynamic Forces reached an agreement to produce phone cards.

Thus far, Event has declined all offers for action-figure and other toy merchandising. And, despite interest from a number of sources, Event has turned down offers for an Ash animated series.

However, Bradach added that there has been serious interest from Hollywood regarding an Ash film project with some big names being touted, although she said no details would be released for the time being.

Event is preparing its first limited series — an Ash spin-off and a one-shot — to appear in the spring of 1996.

22 Brides, a four-issue limited series based on the girl gang introduced in Ash #3 and inspired by the recording artists of the same name, will examine the real-world issues and concerns that face a gang of young women attempting to survive life on the streets, as they are caught up in the middle of a mob war.

The girls-with-guns series stands on its own, although there are also some strong ties to Ash — Ashley Quinn's sister is introduced for the first time in 22 Brides.

The series is created and plotted by Quesada and Palmiotti, written by Fabian Nicieza, and pencilled by Scott Lee.

Following 22 Brides will be The Kid Death and Fluffy Spring Break Special, written by Quesada and Palmiotti and pencilled by Rick Parker.

The one-shot features two of Quesada and Palmiotti's most-requested characters.

"During a period in the comics industry that has seen many publishers cutting back, Event intends to stay the course it has charted from the beginning," Bradach said: "a slow, controlled growth and expansion responding to the demands of the marketplace for continued high quality."

> "Fan and retailer response to the story, art, characters, and the entire package in general was overwhelmingly positive."

Event's 'Ash' #0 has alternate covers

The questions that readers have been asking about Ash over the past year will be answered in Ash #0, scheduled to ship in January from Event Comics. Readers will understand the secrets behind Ashley Quinn's super-powers and how he got them, as well as where the mysterious machine came from. The issue takes Ashley into the future, where he finds that Earth's hero is none other than Ash.

Ash #0 has two different covers, both by series creators Joe Quesada and Jimmy Palmiotti. One features the current Ash, while the other shows the Ash of the future. An Ash "scrapbook" of sketches, photos, and behind-the-scenes information is also included in the issue, which has no ads.

Here come the brides—22 of 'em

A mini-series about a gang of lethal ladies will spin off from Event Comics' series Ash in March. 22 Brides, which takes its name from the real-life recording artists of the same name, features musical sisters Carrie and Libby and a loose-knit group of women who find themselves in the middle of a mob war. When they were first introduced in Ash #3, they were hijacking a subway train. In 22 Brides, they are forced to choose which side of the law they will follow.

In the mini-series, readers will meet the tough women and learn how this group of ladies came together from across the country, as well as their connection with mobster Don Joe Fonti. By the end of the four-issue series, one of the women will die, one will betray the group, and none of them will ever be the same.

Fans of Ash will see some familiar faces and connections in 22 Brides. Much of the action takes place in the Slimelight nightclub, familiar to Ash readers, and one of the main characters is the sister of Ashley "Ash" Quinn.

22 Brides is plotted by Ash co-creators Joe Quesada and Jimmy Palmiotti and written by Fabian Nicieza.

"We're very excited to have Fabian on board for 22 Brides," said Palmiotti. "If anybody knows how to write an exciting team comic book with realistic characters, it's Fabian."

The mini-series' art is by newcomer Scott Lee, and 22 Brides represents his first significant published work.

"I'm proud to say that I discovered Scott and was lucky enough to sign him up before any other publishers found him," said Quesada. "I've never seen a better unsigned talent and I think his work is going to blow fans away.„

Publisher Laurie Bradach said 22 Brides is much more than another Bad Girl comic book. "At the center of the story are characters as real as your next-door neighbors and coworkers. Some are tragic, some are inspiring, some are amusing — and all of them are amazing.

"Event Comics has resisted adding any new titles to our schedule for several reasons, but 22 Brides was an opportunity that we just couldn't pass by."

A Few Words Concerning Censorship In America

by Nancy Collins

I find having to write a defense of my right as an emancipated American adult to write, watch, and read whatever the hell I want to — or can afford — an exceptionally wearying task. Part of it stems from the knowledge that no matter what I say, or how reasoned my arguments, the pro-censorship forces are going to simply throw "family values" and Jesus in my face; as if freedom and families are somehow mutually exclusive territories.

Comics are a particularly easy target for censorship in this country because of the perception of the mass culture that they're still (or only) for children. Every time the local police waltz into the local Android's Dungeon, they're always astounded that it's not just racks upon racks of Walt Disney and Archie, as if there's a law saying it's supposed to still be 1963. And since the Baby Boomers seem to have a vested interest insuring their progeny remain permanent infants (god forbid they should grow up and make their parents look old), you can whip up all kinds of anti-freedom sentiment by claiming what you're doing is in the best interest of "the children". (Although, they don't seem to have any problems with cutting back immunization programs, voting down tax expenditures on public education, and ladling on debt that guarantees most children born during the 1980s will never own their own home, car, or soul — but god forbid they should see titties and dicks before the age of 21!)

I was raised in rural Arkansas, in a town that didn't allow public dancing, sex ed classes, or liquor-by-the-drink. We had one of the highest juvenile delinquency, teen pregnancy, and underage alcoholic rates in the state — thereby, in the country. Family values? Yeah, right. Personally, I was raised to respect the privacy and personal decisions of others. Or, to quote my grandfather; "The right to swing your arm ends at my nose". If someone doesn't like what I'm writing, fine. That's their prerogative. You don't have to buy it. You don't have to read it. I'm a great believer in voting with my feet. However, if you don't like what I write and try to have it banned — either by trying to put my publisher out of business or having those retailers who sell and distribute my work through their stores arrested, then you've finished swinging your arm, buddy. I realize that thinking more than four years ahead is anathema to this country, you don't really want to live in the world you think you're building. Believe me, it's not family-oriented.

Verotik is soliciting and collecting donations on behalf of John Hunter and Michael Kennedy of Planet Comics, the Oklahoma retailer recently arrested for selling what local authorities deemed "obscene material". Aside from the legal bills, they were evicted by their landlord and forced to relocate; incurring business costs they could have never planned for. By sending a donation, you not only help a fellow industry professional, but you register your vote against censorship in America. This industry cannot afford to lose another quality retailer.

• With a donation of $5 or more, you will receive a free, limited "San Diego Edition", signed copy of Nancy Collins' Sunglasses After Dark #1/2.

• Also, there are 25 copies in existence of the first printing of Deathdealer #1 signed by Frank Frazetta, Glenn Danzig, and Simon Bisley. Verotik is putting up for auction two of these incredibly rare editions to the highest bidders. The money will go directly to Planet Comics for their defense in this outrageous violation of their first amendment rights. Please place your bid in writing, do not send money. Verotik will contact the highest bidders after all of the bids are in. The cut off date to have bids in the hands of Verotik is December 10, 1995.

Send donations and Deathdealer bids to: Verotik Publishing, Attn. Planet Comics, Box 64859, Los Angeles, CA 90064

Introducing the "no minimum" minimum!

We know you've had a hard time lately juggling three order forms every month, figuring out discounts and meeting minimum orders. Capital City Distribution takes another step to make it easier on you - introducing the "no minimum" minimum.

Now you decide what your minimum advance order will be. We'll take orders of any size.

Try ordering first from Capital and see how much easier it is. Advance Comics has the easiest catalog layout to follow. Our products are now listed with a numerical discount in Orderpak (no more figuring out discount codes). And we have maximum discount pricing, the best possible price for each product, usually 5+ points better than discounts available anywhere else.

On top of that, we're confident that once you order from Capital, our service and products will get you to buy from us again. Our mission is to make the service you get at Capital far superior to that you get anywhere else (we think it already is). And we believe that the products we carry are products you can't make it without. Cool, on-the-edge products that will grab your customers' attention, get them excited, and make them spend extra cash. Products that make the difference between a so-so month and a great month.

So open up an Advance Comics today and capitalize on this sweet opportunity.

Call 1-800-546-5467 or 608-223-2000 to place a "no minimum" order with one of our customer service reps.

MainBrain starts thinking

By Matthew Brady

MainBrain Productions, founded by Chris Ulm and Tom Mason, opened for business Sept. 8 in scenic offices overlooking the Pacific Ocean. The company is an entertainment firm specializing in comic books, new media development, game design, scripts, trading cards, marketing, and advertising.

"MainBrain Productions is a virtual entertainment company," Ulm said, "We have access to more than a thousand writers, artists, colorists, computer graphics specialists, and designers from whom we form creative teams for specific projects. Once a project is completed, the groups disband, and we move on to new projects with new teams."

Ulm said that MainBrain's design is based on a combination of designs used by video-game development firms, advertising agencies, and movie production companies. Team leaders at MainBrain are referred to as "producers."

Mason explained that, despite the references to software and advertising companies, comic books remain at the core of MainBrain Productions. "Our goal at MainBrain is take the form of comics and apply it to several different formats: CD-ROMs, video games and software, television and movies, animation, on-line services and more," Mason said.

Mason and Ulm were among the founders of Malibu Comics, and Mason said that, while there, new ideas or project proposals would cross their desks, only to disappear into a maze of approval processes. He said that, by the time the project was ready to officially proceed, it was too late to seize the day. Aspects of many projects were lost.

Mason explained that things have changed now. "Now that we have our own development company, if there's an idea that isn't right for a particular client, we're free to search the globe for a client for whom the idea is perfect. It's very liberating," he said.

While he stated that the Marvel buy-out had absolutely nothing to do with their decision to leave Malibu, Mason said that both he and Ulm felt it was time for a change. "A lot of people forget that we'd been at Malibu since its founding, 10 years ago," Mason said, "and, during that time, we've been doing relatively the same jobs — marketing [Mason] and editorial [Ulm]. That's a long time to run with the same job at one particular company."

Both Mason and Ulm stressed that they left Malibu under the best of terms, and there is no animosity between the two companies.

Summarizing the formation of MainBrain Productions, Mason said, "MainBrain Productions is a business and creative partnership between myself and Chris Ulm. It's a quantum leap of faith on our part. If it succeeds, it will be because of our ideas, our execution, and our follow-throughs with the relationships that we build in the coming years. It's a combination of several dreams, to build our own business, to work in an environment that values the process as much as the result, and to work at the beach."

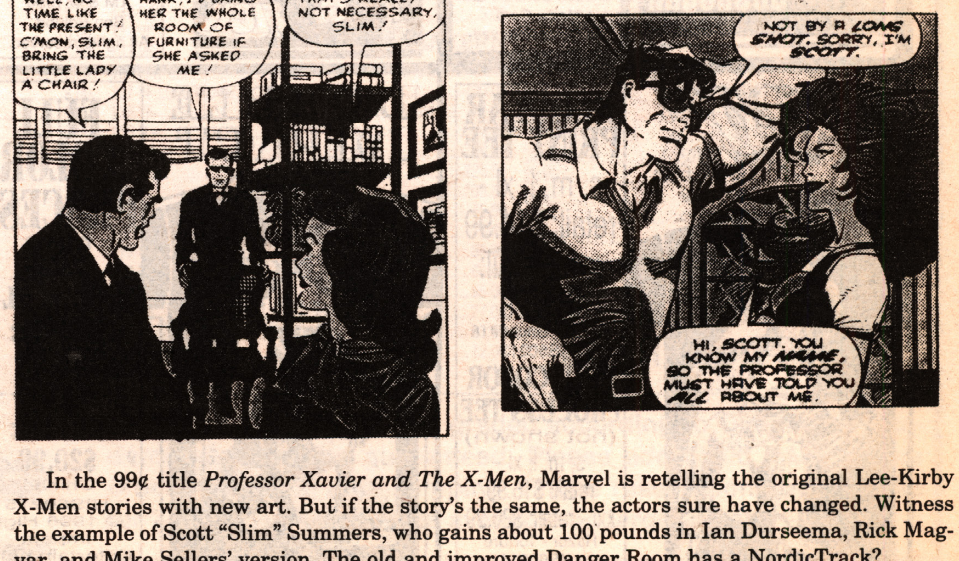
Then ... and then again



WELL, NO TIME LIKE THE PRESENT! C'MON, SLIM, BRING THE LITTLE LADY A CHAIR!
HANK, I'D BRING HER THE WHOLE ROOM OF FURNITURE IF SHE ASKED ME!
THAT'S REALLY NOT NECESSARY, SLIM!
NOT BY A LONG SHOT. SORRY, I'M SCOTT.
HI, SCOTT. YOU KNOW MY NAME, SO THE PROFESSOR MUST HAVE TOLD YOU ALL ABOUT ME.

In the 99¢ title Professor Xavier and The X-Men, Marvel is retelling the original Lee-Kirby X-Men stories with new art. But if the story's the same, the actors sure have changed. Witness the example of Scott "Slim" Summers, who gains about 100 pounds in Ian Durseema, Rick Magyar, and Mike Sellers' version. The old and improved Danger Room has a NordicTrack?

HOBBY GAME DISTRIBUTORS

More Games.
More Profits.

Some comic distributors would like you to think that the game industry consists of only 300 game items. At Hobby Game Distributors we have more than 8,500 game-related products on hand now. Eighteen years of experience has taught us that while a shop might choose to stock less than 300 games, choosing from only 300 games is not much of a choice. Imagine a comic store stocking only "X" titles and advertising a "wide selection." Our salespeople--with more than 40 years combined experience in game distribution--are experts at helping you put together a game section that will maximize your profits. Additionally, we carry comics and comic-related product from over 30 publishers. At Hobby Game we want to see you get more, not less.

Ranting & Raving

with R. C. Harvey

Adaptation and Survival

David Wiley Miller, who does the comic strip Non Sequitur, continues to experiment with the form. His latest novelty is a two-column version of the strip that permits newspaper editors to choose to run the feature either on a page of comic strips or by itself somewhere in the paper as a gag cartoon.

Wiley (to use his pen name) has also played with format variations in his Sunday strip. At first, he did the usual one-third page standard with a couple throw-away panels at the beginning for papers that used the feature in the quarter-page format. But few papers, he realized, used the third-page — and the reduction of the remaining panels for the quarter page is so great that the artwork suffered.

So he redesigned his cartoon as a two-panel feature: At the top is a large panel; at the bottom, a long, narrow, horizontal strip of a panel. Each panel is a separate gag.

Papers who opted for the quarter-page format dropped the bottom panel, and papers using the third-page format got a "bonus cartoon" — the bottom panel, which was always a single-panel pantomime gag.

The object, Wiley once told me, is to make use of space in ways that meet editors' needs as well as the cartoon's needs. "I'm using the space allowed for maximum effect," he said. "It maintains the quality of the art better. And it gives newspapers an incentive to run the third-page format: If they do, they get the bonus cartoon — two for the price of one."

The original strip-format design of Non Sequitur was conceived with the same philosophy. When Wiley realized that syndicates were not buying the traditional two-column, single-panel gag cartoon, because newspaper editors seemed to want cartoon features that fit on their pages of comic strips, he reformatted his thinking to fit the demand for strip format.

"The whole point of my design concept was to maximize the use of the space given," Wiley told me. "I approached it as a design job. I have this space. How do I utilize it? Composition is very important: utilize the space, make it readable."

In its strip format, Non Sequitur "reads" like the conventional strip, even though it's just one panel: The reader must take in the entire composition — words and pictures — all the way from the left to the right, just as if he were "reading" a multi-panel strip.

Wiley cleverly exploits this dimensional aspect in composing his gags, too. He spots the captions and speech balloons strategically, so that the reader must see and comprehend the picture before the words make any sense. Or vice versa.If you want a good dose of Wiley's antic art and wry sense of humor all at once, pick up a copy of his latest collection of reprints, The Non Sequitur Survival Guide for the Nineties ($9.95 at all good bookstores). Not only will you enjoy the "panoramic effect" of his gag compositions, but, if you're like me, you'll savor the comic drawings themselves: Wiley's delicate cross-hatching and his often absurd-looking characters, innocent bystanders on the street, and cats and dogs with attitude in the margins of his gags.

"SPECIAL WANTS"

1) ADVENTURES OF THE DETECTIVE
2) DETECTIVE DAN, SECRET OP 48

Humor Publishing put out two "cardboard" cover comic books in early 1933; they were the first Dick Tracy knock-offs. I will pay a fair price for these or trade items from my ads. Some one of you must have one, or know where they live. I will gladly accept Xeroxes as they are needed for primary research for my book. Please respond as soon as possible. I need to solve a puzzle.

I also collect pre 1933 comic books from Cupples & Leon, Stokes, Hearst, Saalfield, Donohue, etc. Especially Yellow Kid and large size Katzenjammer Kids, Jimmy, Little Nemo, Maud, Little Sammy Sneeze, etc. for my research into the comic book's earliest origins. What do you have? I also am looking for all copies of Foxhole and Police Trap. by Simon & Kirby. I Buy or trade, even sell, comics.

TWILIGHT OF THE DINOSAURS (TAKE II): ALL PARTIES INVOLVED IN O'BRIAN v. McKAY GATHER IN THE SUBURBS TO BID FAREWELL TO THE DINOSAURS AND THE LOST ACTION HERO, WHO LITERALLY LEFT A MOVIE SCREEN TO TAKE THEM AWAY...
WOW- AREN'T THEY EXTINCT?
WHERE HAVE YOU BEEN? THOSE CREATURES WERE LABORATORY-GROWN
I MEANT THE DRIVE-IN THEATER- NOW THAT'S A DINO-SAUR!
LOOK, PROF. O'BRIAN-
-IF WE STAY HERE, WE'D BE LIVING IN A CONFINED COMPOUND UNDER CONSTANT SCRUTINY- OUR EVERY WORD ANALYZED BY THE MEDIA
YOUR PRESIDENT MAY BE ABLE TO LIVE LIKE THAT- BUT NOT US!
HMMPH! SOME SCIENTIFIC EXPERIMENT- YOU'VE SOLD OUT!
O'BRIAN, THAT SETTLEMENT YOU SIGNED WILL PAY A LOT OF BILLS! SO SHUT UP BEFORE YOU TALK THEM OUT OF THEIR DECISION!
- YOU DID GROW US AND GIVE US INTELLIGENCE BUT WE'D HAVE LIMITED CHOICE IN A WORLD WHERE MY SPECIES USED TO ROAM FREE!
OF COURSE I UNDERSTAND- THERE ARE THOSE WHO'D LIKE TO LIMIT THE CHOICES OF MY SPECIES!
THERE'S ENOUGH OPEN SPACE HERE AT THE DRIVE-IN-
IT'S NOT THAT WE'RE UNGRATEFUL, DR. McKAY-
-TO ACCOMMODATE YOU AND THE DINOSAURS WITHOUT, AH, DESTROYING A MOVIE THEATER
ACH! DOT IS DER PROBLEM MIT YOUR VORLD, MR. BYRD. VHERE I COME FROM I VOULDN'T THINK TWICE ABOUT IT!
THAT'S WHY YOU SHOULD GET BACK TO YOUR REALITY ASAP...
...WE WERE ABLE TO CONVINCE DANNY'S MOM TO DROP ENDANGERMENT CHARGES BUT THE FEDERAL AND STATE ARE ANOTHER MATTER!
AHEM! LET'S GET THIS SHOW ON THE ROAD
HAND OVER THE MAGIC TICKET, DANNY- LET HIM GO BACK INTO HIS MOVIE AND WE CAN GO HOME! I'M MISSING ROSEANNE HEY- IF YOU AIN'T GONNA KILL THE DINOSAURS, WHATTYA WANT 'EM FOR?
DER DINOSAURS HAFF POWER TO PREVENT A DISASTER!

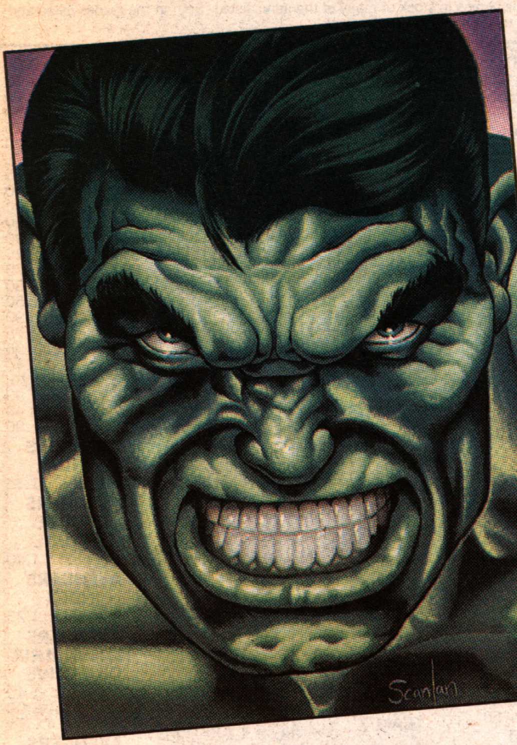
Four Views of '95 Marvel Masterpieces



By Jodie Lapin
For Fleer

This year's Fleer Marvel Masterpieces set allows fans to compare the art styles of four different artists through a "dare-to-compare" set featuring 36 Marvel characters drawn by Nelson, Peter Scanlan, David DeVries, and Dimitri Patelis.

Recently, the four artists sat down to discuss their likes and differences in painting this annual card set and how their styles compare to each other, as well as past Masterpieces artists.

CBG: When you were first asked to paint for the '95 Marvel Masterpieces, what is the process you went through, from the first phone call to the final piece, to create each card?

Scanlan: Usually I sort of picture them in a scene, almost as if I was directing a $100 billion movie that I would really like to see. I like to make things very dramatic and create a certain atmosphere.

I try to picture characters in a scene that will capture their powers and strengths. Once I have decided on that, I start making thumbnail sketches. I also like to take pictures of models posed in the way I envision the character. Then, once I get the OK, I start painting, and everything else flows from there.

Nelson: Every painting is really kind of a new experience, but I try to attack it each time with the same technique. When I begin a painting, I like to reference what the character looks like. I try to capture the kind of situation that character would most likely find himself in and what he would be doing. For example, Bishop is supposed to be a tough soldier, so I would place him in a background like Beirut after a bad bombing.

When I can't picture in my head what position a character would take, I call up some of my comic-book friends and have them pose, in their underwear, in funny action postures. Once I have decided on how I can depict this character, I lay it down on a board where I can easily change it. Then, when I really am sure this is what I'm going to do and this is how I want it, I begin painting.

DeVries: The first thing I do is get an opinion about that character. I think you can get an opinion on the way a character looks, even if you are not real familiar with them. I focus on three aspects of a character: who they are, what they look like, and my own opinion of them.

Once my opinion is formed, I do about five or 10 thumbnail sketches, which are typically very loose so I can make any necessary changes. As a reference, I shoot pictures of myself or friends in different poses to get a feel for how the character should be positioned. Then I project all of this onto a board and begin painting.

Patelis: I started off as an artist using airbrush, and I have developed it to a certain point that satisfies me. I prefer it to do certain textures, the way I know how to do it. It is like a trademark of my work. So, once I have sketched some thumbnails, I pick up the airbrush and let the ideas move on from there.

CBG: Approximately how long does it take you complete one piece?

DeVries: The quickest card I did was in five hours. That card was of Dr. Doom, and, since he is only a big iron mask with a cap it wasn't very detailed. The longest it ever took me to paint a card was a week and a half. The character was Namor, and the reason it took so long was because he is from a different environment than what I'm used to painting — water. Ideally, I can do one painting every four to five days.

CBG: What did you think of the Marvel characters you painted?

Scanlan: I liked them a lot. The Marvel

Fans compare four artists' styles on Marvel characters in Fleer's 1995 Marvel Masterpieces

By Marlene Petter
For Fleer

1995 Marvel Masterpieces are due for release in mid-November. The 150-card set features versions of 36 characters by four artists — Nelson, David DeVries, Dimitri Patelis, and Peter Scanlan. In addition to the 114 comparison cards, each artist chose nine characters he was interested in painting. The "dare-to-compare" theme is carried through editorially, with each card narrated by the character himself, an enemy, an ally, and a love interest. The suggested retail price for each 10-card pack is $2.99.

"This is a unique Masterpieces set," said Fleer/SkyBox International Business Unit Manager Dan Buckley, "in that fans can compare what they like about one Wolverine versus another. Our four artists have very different styles, so each piece is truly unique. It's a sophisticated concept, and I think fans will love it."

In addition to the 150-card regular set (plus a checklist card), there are several chase card sets:

- E-Motion Parallel Cards: The 150 regular cards will be reprinted on 24-point board (similar to Flair cards) and then laminated. The parallel set uses the SkyBox E-Motion process, the first time the process has been used to depict Marvel characters.
- Canvas: Canvas stock is used for the first time to produce 24 cards. Packed in approximately 50% of the packs, the cards feature: Archangel, Beast, Bishop, Cable, Daredevil, Galactus, Gambit, Ghost Rider, Human Torch, Iceman, Invisible Woman, Jubilee, Magneto, Namor, Professor X, Psylocke, Punisher, Rogue, Silver Surfer, Spider-Man, Thing, and War Machine.
- HoloFlash Cards: Etched holographic foil is applied to eight cards featuring: Apocalypse, Carnage, Dr. Doom, Mandarin, Mr. Sinister, Sabretooth, Thanos, and Venom. The cards are packed approximately one in every 12 packs.
- Mirage: A two-card set, packed approximately one card for every 360 packs, the Mirage cards feature a lenticular treatment with four characters on each card. By tilting the card at different angles, collectors can view one of the four characters. The Classic Avengers card features Captain America, The Hulk, Iron Man, and Thor, while The X-Men card pictures Cyclops, Jean Grey, Storm, and Wolverine.

Each of the Masterpieces '95 artists has his own style.

Nelson: Nelson said his style is very true-to-life and he strives for a photograph-like quality.

He said his favorite piece is The Thing. "My Thing piece reminds me of the way comic books used to be drawn. I think I captured a believable look for this totally unreal character."

David DeVries: DeVries' described his work as more impressionistic. His characters are believable, yet strangely unreal. The angles he chooses gives viewers a new look at their favorite characters. DeVries also worked on the '94 Fleer Ultra X-Men and Ultra Spider-Man. In Marvel Masterpieces '95, he said he likes his Namor piece the best. "I think that piece has a lot of power. Namor's in the water but he's coming right at you, no holds barred!"

Dimitrios Patelis: A self-taught artist from Greece, Patelis said his work has a softer, fantasy-art look, making the characters appear more sleek and graceful.

He added that his favorite piece for Masterpieces '95 is Sabretooth. "I drew him as if he had gone totally berserk. He's really lost it; he's on a rampage and he's coming for you. This is not someone you want to meet in a dark alley."

Peter Scanlan: Scanlan said his bright, clean style makes the characters he paints pop off the canvas. He's painted cards for both the 1994 and 1995 Fleer Ultra X-Men sets. He said he's happiest with his Omega Red piece in this set. "I was really successful in capturing the character's essence here. Generally, I prefer bad guys to good guys, because evil is so much more interesting to try to portray."

characters are very well-designed, and I enjoyed trying to make them look real. I really enjoyed painting Modok, because he's just a floating baby head. This bitter little guy in a chair was not only fun but enjoyable.

Nelson: I agree. They're great! I grew up with Marvel and I can literally thank Marvel Comics for the career choice I have today. Marvel is one of the most creative comics outlets I have seen in the comics industry, with more ingenuity put into Marvel characters than any other company.

As an artist, I get to delve into the personalities of these characters, which allows me to have fun role-playing on how they would act. I think children today are out there having as much fun reading these comics and enjoying these cards as I had at their age — and still have now.

I had a lot of fun painting Sabretooth, because I had one of my friends pose and it was a blast to transform him into Sabretooth. I also had my ex-girlfriend pose for Jubilee. Wolverine has been a favorite of mine since I was a kid, and Dr. Doom was fun because he is a classic Marvel villain. The Deathlok piece I got to paint allowed me to put two elements together — a rotten corpse face and a slick face combined as one.

CBG: Which Masterpieces painting offered the most challenge and how did you confront this challenge?

Scanlan: The biggest challenge for me was painting The Human Torch. Since he is made of fire, I really wanted to convey that he is incredibly hot — that if you stood too close you would get burned.

To overcome any challenge I usually go through reams of paper making sketches and trying to capture the right angle and mood of that certain character. My studio is always an ecological disaster when working on a set.

Nelson: Painting metal characters, such as Silver Surfer and Iron Man, offered the most challenge to me. You never have a model for silver people, and the chance of silver people walking around your apartment is pretty slim.

Basically, I try to go for clean, bright, and realistic, so a metallic character forced me to look at the supernatural side of my painting abilities.

DeVries: Rogue was my biggest challenge, because any time men are portrayed, they are screaming, kicking, and punching. The women, on the other hand, are doing the same thing, only they are sticking out their breasts. I didn't want to make Rogue a sexual object. I wanted her to be tough, and the real challenge was portraying her as powerful, yet feminine, but not the way she usually is.

Patelis: The set as a whole offered me something I had never done before. I had to start by looking at a lot of comic books to try to get the atmosphere in order to make everything work together. I also studied other artists' work, like Dave [DeVries], and I looked at the colors used by past Masterpieces artists like the Hildebrandts.

CBG: How does your style differ, not only from the other artists in the set, but in the comics arena?

Scanlan: The fantasy-to-realism aspect among artists always varies. Technically, I have my own way of doing things. I prefer to focus on intensity, color choice to depict moods and atmospheres, a certain degree of realism, and the degree of shading and contrast. I try to make things real but also divorced from reality to the fantastical. I like to take bizarre characters and make them real.

Sometimes, a certain time of day when the light is hitting something, you try to copy it. Maybe you do something right and it looks good or maybe you do something wrong, but it looks good anyway, so you use it. That's a part of creating your own style, as well.

Nelson: As I said before, clean, bright, and realistic is the style I tend to go for. I think my style really developed from my background in black-and-white comic-book work. Using a photo-realistic look with a little bit of that comic-book dynamic actually is the perfect marriage for a card set like Masterpieces. It's the comic-book dynamic with a realistic touch. I guess I just tend to do what I do, and a style is born. As they say, a picture is worth a thousand words, and through painting you can really illustrate that. It is, however, harder to put a story on one card. But with painting, you can get a subtlety that you sometimes cannot get with black-and-white.

CBG: Who or what were some of your role models? Do you still use the tricks your art teachers or mentors taught you in your work today?

Scanlan: It was a real thrill for me to be doing Marvel Masterpieces the year after the Hildebrandts. There was a time when I cut school to see the Hildebrandt brothers and get their autographs. I guess I'm catching up to them a little bit.

Nelson: When I was young I fell in love with the writers and artists, as well as the characters, in comic books. So my role models will always be John Byrne, Jack Kirby, and John Romita. I learned invaluable information from Gene Colan, who drew Daredevil and was also my art teacher in college.

DeVries: Bill Sienkiewicz was the reason I started painting. He always made it fun and accessible. Jack Kirby, of course, and Mark Frederickson, who painted Kingpin for the Fleer Ultra Spider-Man set this year. If you look at that piece, you will find a lot of resemblances to my work.

Patelis: Since I started out as a commercial illustrator, most of my role models are from the fine arts. I look to Michelangelo, Escher, and Dali. I also have many role models in the world of architecture. By having this fine-art background I can add a different perspective on drawing the characters.

CBG: Did you know, or even dare to dream, that one day your interest in comics would lead to a career?

Scanlan: I used to draw comics as a kid. Those were mostly exaggerated and operatic, full of high drama. It seems like the chance to turn a hobby into a career came looking for me, which is funny because I had been kind of subconsciously preparing for it.

Nelson: This is the perfect medium: realistic paintings of characters I enjoy from comic books. In high school I knew exactly what I wanted to do. I'm a very lucky man — I do what I love to do and I get nice people like those at Fleer to do it.

DeVries: I always knew that I wanted to do comics, since I first got into them in third or fourth grade. I've been reading them ever since. Comics are not taught in schools, so there was a lot of self-teaching for me. There was never a place to learn how to exaggerate features the way you have to do in comics.

Patelis: As I mentioned, I began my career as a commercial illustrator and then extended into the comics field. I had done album and book covers prior to working in comics before. In 1993 I did comic books for the first time, although I had read them as a kid.

CBG: What advice would you give a 17-year-old, sitting in art class, hoping to be able to paint like you one day and to work in comics, as well?

Scanlan: My best advice would be to get a broad experience in general. Don't just draw comics, don't limit yourself. Try to get involved in all aspects of the art world, from photography to ceramics; each will build you up to view things in very different ways. Bring something new to each piece you do with every aspect you have learned.

Nelson: It's the toughest job you'll ever love. Soak up every bit of artistic information you can get your hands on. The more you work, the better you get; the better you get, the more satisfied you are. Artists should never limit themselves.

DeVries: Believe in yourself and disbelieve anyone who tells you that you can't do it. Fiercely defend your right to do art. And I must agree with Peter: Having a broad background is great for developing yourself.

CBG: If you could be any character in the Marvel universe, who would it be and why?

Which character do you feel most in touch with?

Scanlan: I would be Cable because of the rugged time traveler that he is. He leads an exciting life. I would also like to be Iron Man because he can sort of get away from it all and then return once things have calmed down. I can also relate to Spider-Man — crawl like a spider, walk like a man.

Nelson: Definitely Wolverine, because I am short, I probably drink as much, and he's got longish hair like me.

DeVries: Green Goblin is one character I can relate to, because there is something twisted about him. He is similar to The Joker but he has more of a gothic quality, plus I posed for him for the set. I can also relate to Nightcrawler because he is so pensive.

Patelis: I would want to be Carnage because of his evilness. I tend to enjoy pieces that are more wicked and demonic, and it would fascinate me to be able to see that from the delivering end. I definitely relate to Spider-Man, probably because I read him so much when I was young. Although the newer characters may look cooler, I don't relate as much to them.

CBG: What is on the horizon for each of you?

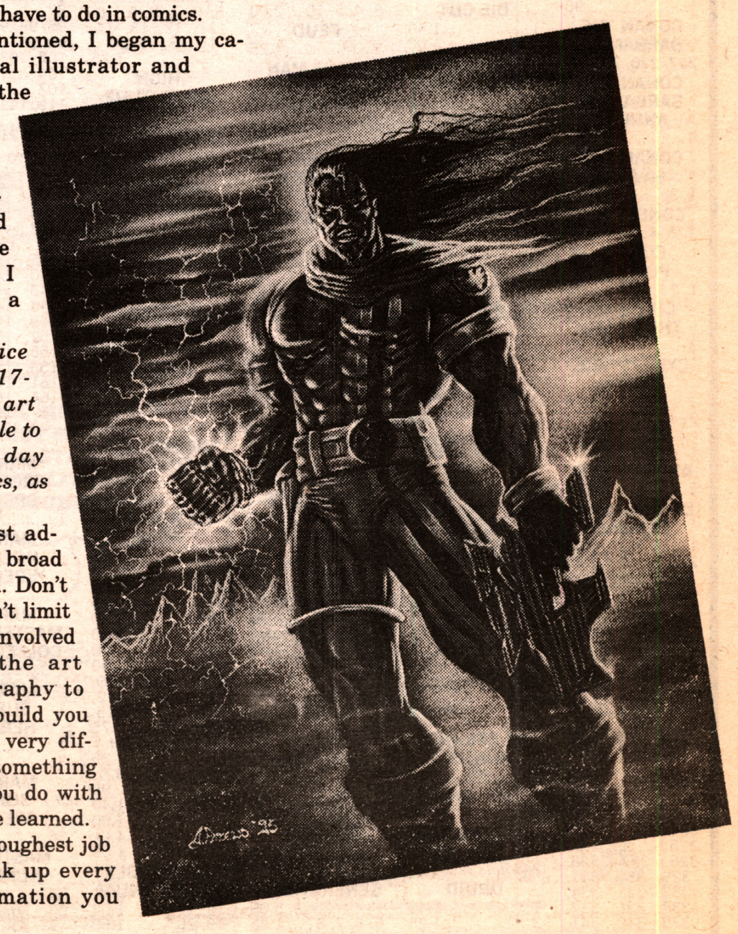
Scanlan: I am looking forward to working more on combining 3-D computer modeling and traditional computer painting. I also plan on doing more comic work, including 15-20 more projects for Fleer.

Nelson: I hope to be doing some more cards for Fleer and I would like to do some work on black-and-white comics, doing just regular comic-book work. I also hope to take a little vacation.

DeVries: I hope to do more card sets. In the short term, I am working on a storyline to publish myself. I would also like to do some more comic-book covers and eventually graphic novels. At some point in the very far future, I would like to get into animation.

Patelis: I hope to paint a series for myself, since most of the work I do is for mass-media markets. It would be nice to do something just for me.



'Marvel Masterpieces' go to the canvas

By Jodie Lapin

For Fleer

Since most masterpieces have been created on canvas, Fleer/SkyBox International has decided to use the same material to showcase the "masterful" art in the 1995 Marvel Masterpieces card set. "We searched high and low, until we found the only vendor in the country who would be able to put the art on canvas, as well as card stock that would satisfy our collectors," said Fleer/SkyBox Production Manager Jim Boyle. "We're thrilled with what we've come up with and we're sure collectors will be delighted."

The difficulty in finding a producer for the 24 Canvas Cards was that the canvas had to be on one side only, to display the art, but the card backs had to remain smooth and rigid, to maintain their shape. "It was a true technological challenge," Boyle said.

If you see something you'd like to have, but think the price is still too high, make an offer. I'll consider anything reasonable. I'll let you know if your bid has been accepted beginning two weeks after the cover date of this issue of CBG. If you don't hear from me soon after that, you'll know either that what you bid on is gone or the offer was too low. One thing's for sure, though; if you don't try, you can't succeed.

Thanks to everyone who answered my previous ad...I had 57 calls, but only enough merchandise to sell to 20 respondents (and there were 2 long boxes!). Here are a few Key books that I have listed way below guide! I just wish I had more!!

Brave and Bold #28 (Guide in Good: $338) VG $200
(1st Justice League) Looks VG, but has tape stain on spine(tape removed) - Interior pages have 1" tear throughout (profess. sealed). Other than that, this is a very collectable book at $100 below good guide!!. Huge Discount off Guide

Justice League of America #2 (Guide in Fine: $250) Fine- $105
Looks Fine, great purple cover, but a light stain on front cover 50% + off Guide

Fantastic Four #48 (Guide in Fine: $225) Fine + $150
Grade at Fine + Slight yellowing inside (virtually all #48's yellow). A few stress lines on spine and on top edge of cover. 30% off Guide

X-Men #8 (Guide in Fine $72) Fine+ $65
Nice Fine+ book of Early X-Men No flaws. 10% off Guide

Avengers #2 (Guide in Fine: $210) Fine $110
A copy I would conservatively grade as Fine because of a slight "ding" on the top left corner, and slight yellowing inside. 50% off Guide

Conan #1 (Guide in Fine: $70) Fine $60
A Fine + copy - no defects to report. 15% off Guide

Fantastic Four Annuals #1 VG & #2 VG+: Both for $70
These books grade out as VG for #1 and VG to VG+ for #2. #1 has a light stain on the cover and minor wear. #2 just has smudges or it would grade higher. I'll sell both these books together for a steal at $70 !!!!!

Tales of Suspense #2 (Guide in Good: $46) $85
This is a Key Book for any pre-hero collector: This book looks almost Fine on the cover, but the interior has significant tanning. Because of that I grade it good. Try and find another copy at this price that isn't a rag!!!

Special: Green Lantern #1 (1960): (Guide in Good...$300) $60

• Comic books are at the center of a growing literacy movement in South Africa, according to an article by Leonard Rifas in Reflex Magazine, a nonprofit Seattle-based newspaper covering the visual arts.

The article focuses on The Storyteller Group a publisher of reality-based educational comics which thrived amid the social and political upheaval surrounding the country's transition from apartheid. Current circulation approaches 5 million, Rifas said.

One comic book, Our Time to Choose, was designed to prepare South Africans for their first democratic elections.

"The Storytellers did not set out to put dramatic conflicts into comics format, but to put their comics into the ongoing national drama," Rifas wrote.

Other titles have adapted works of South African literature to comic-book format and have educated readers on such topics as sex education and the role of the Red Cross. The Storyteller Group creates comics for nongovernmental organizations and corporations and uses the profits to fund such comics for the general public as Heart to Heart, a "romance comic" which deals realistically with issues like spouse abuse, sexism, AIDS, and date rape.

There is a democratically elected government in place, but money for non-government-sponsored programs has been drying up, and finances are tighter for The Storytelling Group and the South African alternative press in general.

Storyteller Publisher Peter Esterhuysen said the group's next project is a monthly series based on oral testimonies of human rights abuses under apartheid. "Each story," said Esterhuysen, "will explore a different facet of what happened and will explore the nature of memory and forgetting, different kinds of coping mechanisms, the reconciliation process, etc., while serving as a grim reminder of what must never be repeated."

• The Meadville, Pa., Tribune took the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the comic strip to look back at the history of its own involvement in the funny pages.

An Oct. 25 feature story researched and written by Nels Juleus noted that the paper had gone from initial resistance when the first strips appeared at the turn of the century to enthusiastic support in current issues. "Each morning we are greeted by a showing of cartoon art in the pages of the Meadville Tribune," Juleus wrote.

That had not been the case when the New York World's The Yellow Kid launched a trend that spread to newspapers nationwide. "Meadville had strong academic and religious leadership," said Juleus, "that often frowned on the frivolity and the shallowness of the comics. Cartoons have often been accused of dulling the wits and creating nasty social habits."

The Pennsylvania paper finally took a chance on its readers' wits and social habits in 1910, when it inaugurated a funnies section composed of the strips Doings of the Duffs and Oscar and Adolphe.

Diana Dillpickles in Movieland was added in 1915, and, by the 1920s, the paper had succumbed to an entire page of strips like Boots and Her Buddies, Freckles and His Friends, and Gene Ahern's Our Boarding House.

"In 1995," wrote Juleus, "the Tribune offers its readers more cartoons than ever."

• Employees of the 415-branch Disney Store chain have their own code for communicating with one another, according to an item in the Oct. 22 Wisconsin Magazine supplement to the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel.

Staffers are referred to as "the cast." The cash register is the "box office." To work in the showroom is to be "on stage," while the storeroom is "backstage." Every work day is another "show," and customers are the show's "guests." Store workers don't take breaks; they take "intermissions."

Reporter Michele Derus said the Glendale, Calif.-based chain is keeping its code word for "shoplifter" a secret.

• Batman Forever was the best of movies and the worst of movies, according to an Entertainment Weekly telephone poll taken between Aug. 4 and 7.

Voters named the film their fourth favorite after Forrest Gump, Apollo 13, and The Lion King, but it topped the list of worst movies. The Batman sequel was the highest-grossing movie of the year, but the 10% of voters who reported they had fallen asleep while watching a movie found Batman Forever to be the No. 1 cinematic sedative of the year.

• The Fall Double Issue of Entertainment Weekly quoted a tip from Batman Editor Denny O'Neil that the Dark Knight's next movie villain will be Poison Ivy. Director Joel Schumacher would only say, "It looks probable that there will be a gorgeous female villain, but no actress has been chosen yet." EW writers Erica Cardozo and Chris Nashawaty predicted the red-tressed Julia Roberts would be the logical choice for the role. Val Kilmer and Chris O'Donnell remain Schumacher's choices for the Dynamic Duo.

• The World POG Federation is close to bankruptcy, according to an Orange County Register story picked up by the Oct. 29 St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

World POG Federation founder Alan Rypinski was quoted as saying, "We did get into a cash bind. An alternative is that one or several of our creditors might pull the trigger on us, and that might mean a bankruptcy situation, filing Chapter 11." Since May, the company's workforce has been cut from 61 to 13.

The article by Orange County Register reporters was headlined "Fad Fades." Bill Hodson, founder of another milkcap-making company, Trov USA, was quoted as saying, "Sales are dead, at least in this country."

Rypinski said the future of the game is in promoting tournaments, and he is banking on events like the Nov. 25 US POG championships held at Knott's Berry Farm and sponsored by the World POG Federation, Milton-Bradley, and Knott's to turn business around.

COMICS TRADER:

This is an area reserved for the advertiser who wants no-frills advertising with a price to match. $36.00 buys one of the 12 equal spaces on a Comics Trader page. These spaces can be bought in any multiple of the $36.00 unit (maximum 6 units per page). We'll reduce the ad and handle all the production - just design your ad on an 8½ x 8½ space and send it with payment. Remember to keep your design simple so your ad will be readable when reduced.

Super Traders should be typed on an 8½" x 11" sheet of paper which will be reduced to fit a ¼ page space. Each Super Trader costs $102.00 - limit 2 Super Traders per page.

COLLECTOR'S SHOWCASE:

This cost-efficient format in COMIC BUYER'S GUIDE offers you typeset space at a discount. Collector's Showcase units are approximately business card size. You may buy as many units as you want for an ad at cost of $25.00 per box. All typesetting, photos, art, borders and logos are done by Krause Publications and are included in the price.

One column ads, 1-3 inches in length, must appear in the classified section. They may be placed under the various classified headings. BUT I DIGRESS

by PETER DAVID

Here at BID, we're starting to get the first rumblings of the response generated by my column about Fourth World, the comic-book store in Oklahoma that is facing prosecution for allegedly distributing pornographic material (i.e., comic books by such publishers as Verotik and Eros).

The multiple counts indicate impressively how comics are being targeted by politicians, district attorneys, and censors who usually proclaim, oh, no, they aren't in favor of censorship, per se. They just want to censor stuff that they don't like.

So I attempted to conduct a sort of mail-order fund-raiser via this column. The intended recipient is the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund, an organization devoted to defending anyone facing prosecution or persecution because of his or her participation in the comics industry.

The CBLDF, in addition to providing public-information seminars, has participated in the defense of a multitude of comics stores and comic-book creators who have been harassed by people guarding the right of free expression (i.e., guarding it for themselves). The CBLDF now faces the daunting financial prospect of the Oklahoma defense and is also trying to cope with past legal bills from other cases.

My suggestion was that everyone reading the column — fans, retailers, pros, and even publishers (who, over-all, are the chintziest contributors to the CBLDF) — send one to 10 bucks, or more, to the CBLDF. My reasoning was that, if everyone sent something, the pure strength in numbers would go a long way towards contributing to the CBLDF's war chest.

I've received word from Susan Alston, the CBLDF's executive director, that the response since the column has been nothing short of phenomenal.

Contributions have been pouring in to the tune of 30 or 40 missives a day. Tons of $10 checks or bills, a few that were $1 (hey, everything helps), and donations as high as $200, are piling up at the CBLDF office.

And many of you also included supportive and praise-filled notes.

Susan is ecstatic. My feeling is: We're on a roll. Let's keep it going.

As I said before, it's irrelevant whether you like comics such as those currently under prosecution. If attacks on the First Amendment and the comic-book field are not met with aggressive response now, then, sooner or later, the censors will get to some comic book you do like.

If all the groundwork and precedent has already been set, it's that much easier to target other titles that are appreciated by adult readers, but might be considered "dangerous" for young readers (case in point: Spawn).

So that address once again is: The Comic Book Legal Defense Fund, P.O. Box 693, Northampton, MA 01061.

Peter David, writer of stuff, can be written to at To Be Continued Inc., P.O. Box 39, Bayport, NY 11705.

> "In Germany, they came first for the Communists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Communist. Then they came for the Jews, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for the trade unionists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist. Then they came for the Catholics, and I didn't speak up because I was a Protestant. Then they came for me, and by that time no one was left to speak up."

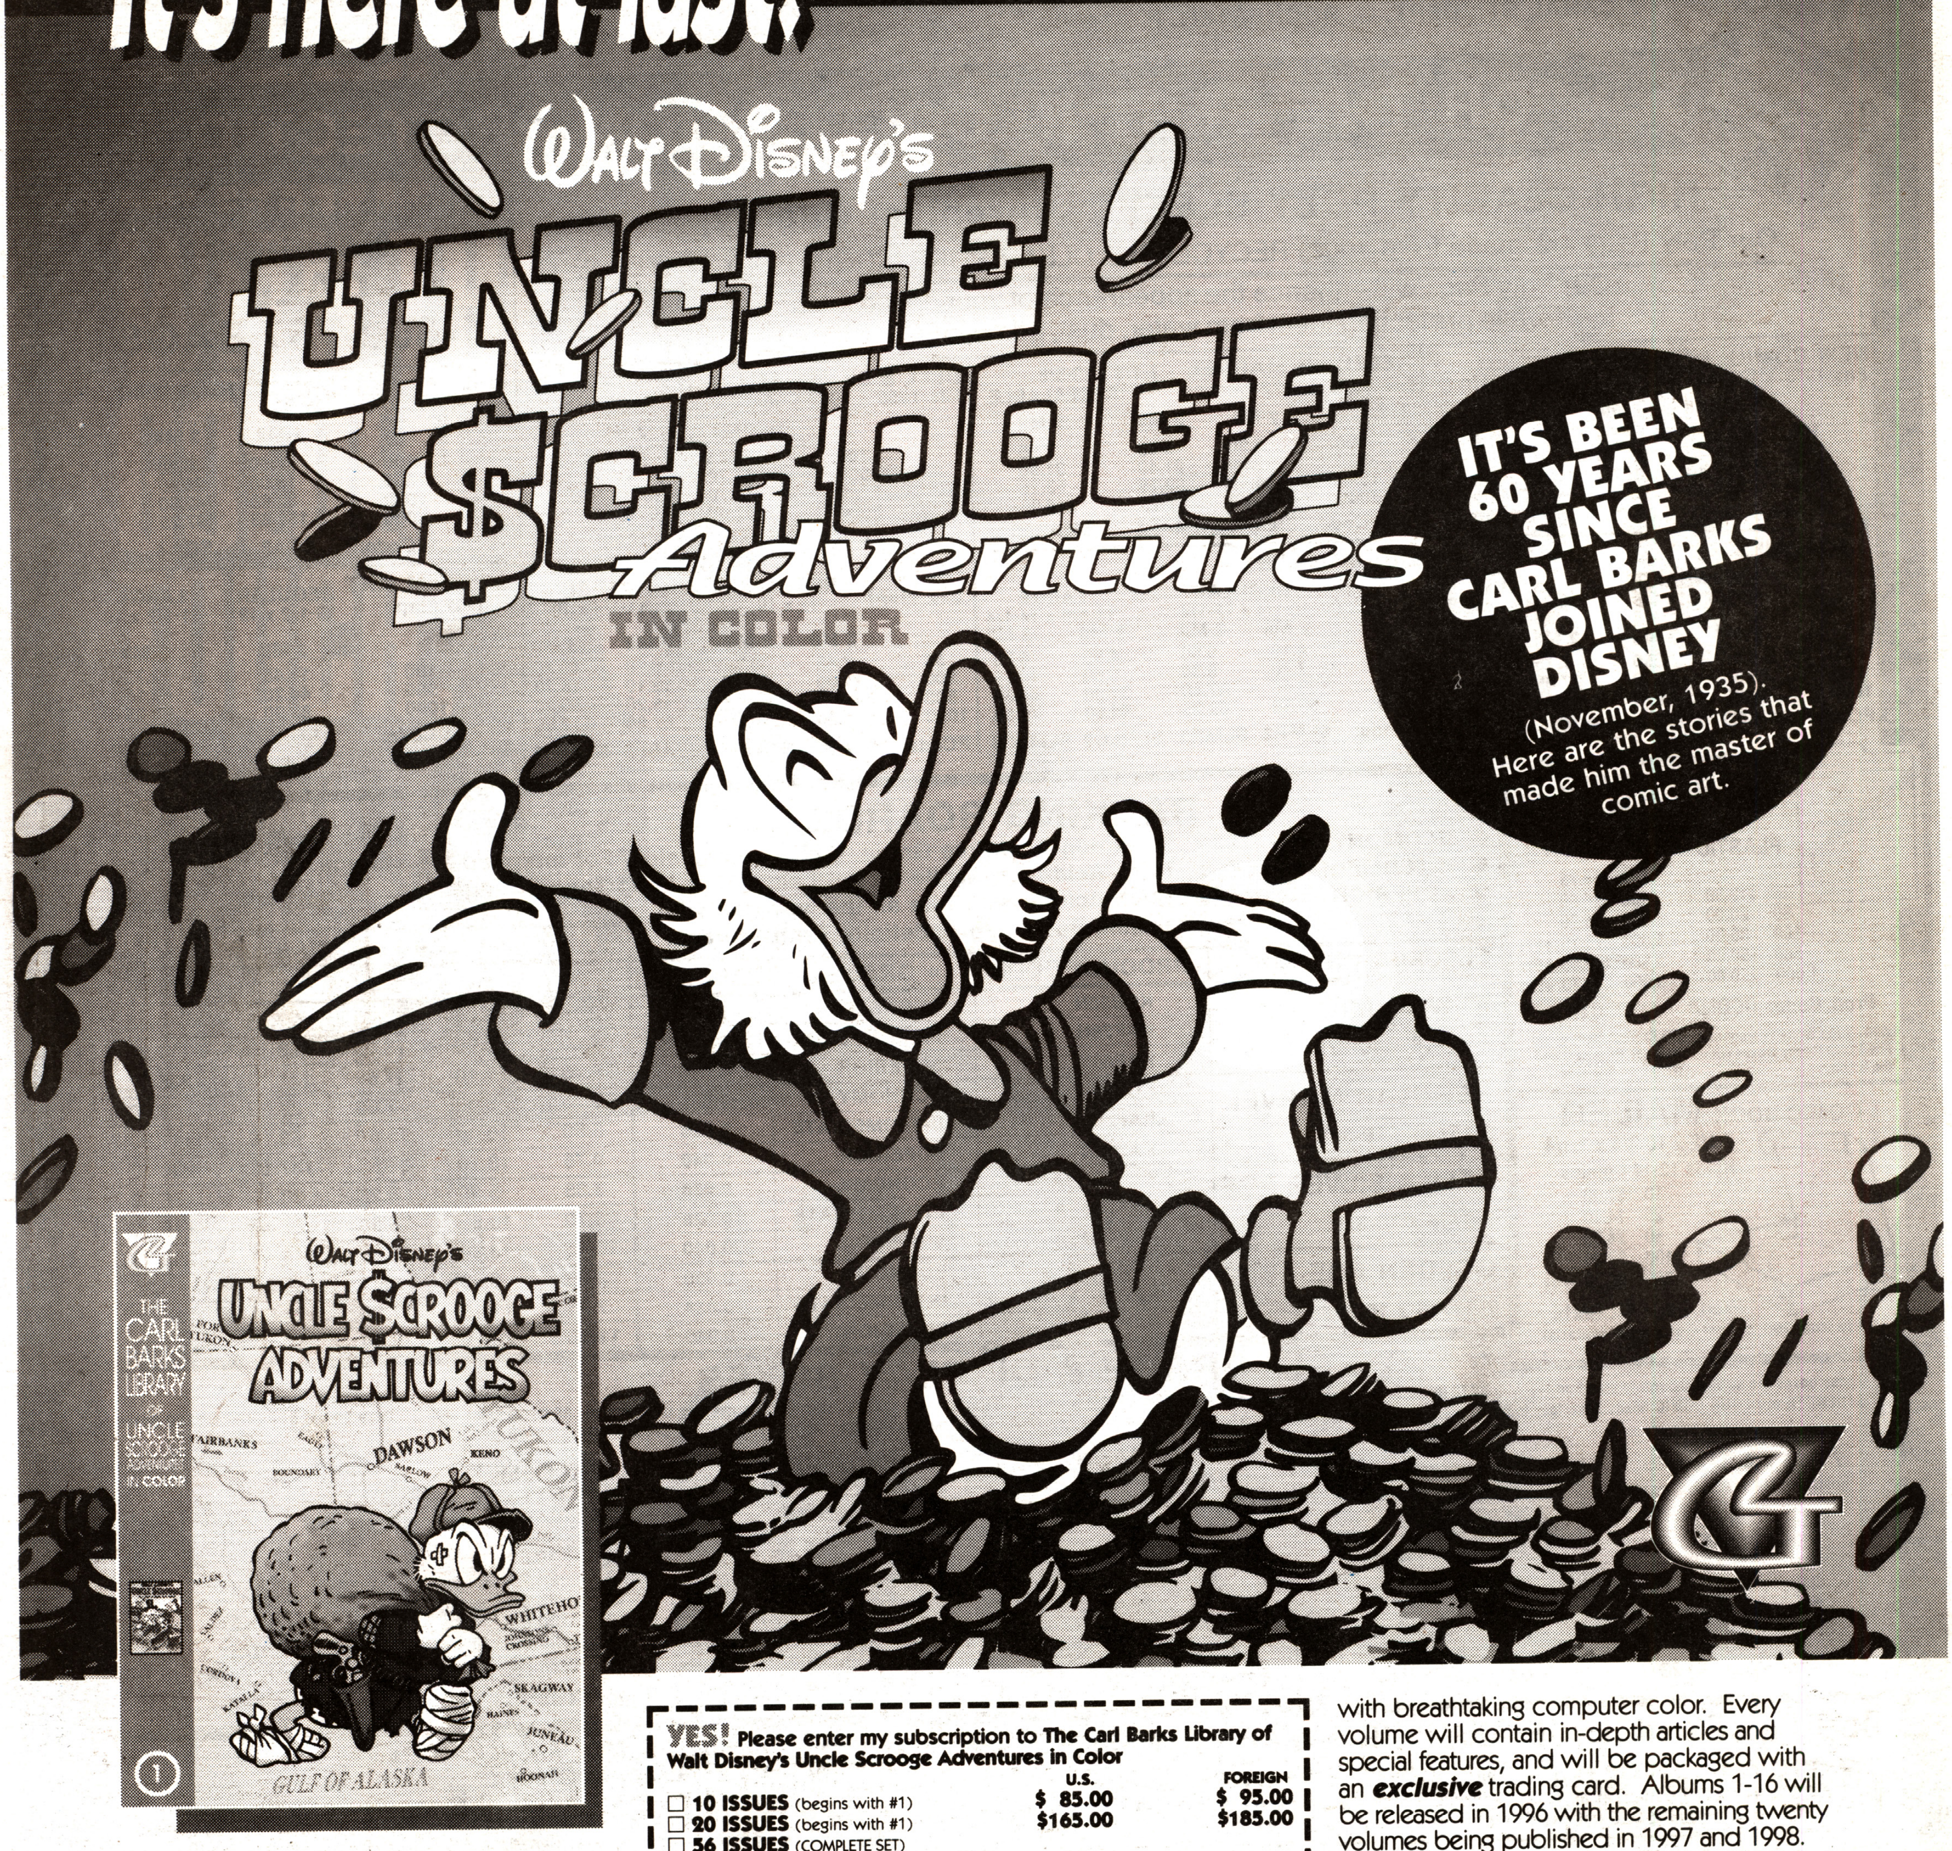
It's here at last!

The Carl Barks album series everyone has been waiting for!



IT'S BEEN 60 YEARS SINCE CARL BARKS JOINED DISNEY

(November, 1935). Here are the stories that made him the master of comic art.

The best of the best debuts in February: The Carl Barks Library of Walt Disney's Uncle Scrooge Adventures in Color!

Beginning with Uncle Scrooge Four Color 386 (#1), fifty-six affordable volumes will chronologically reprint all of Barks' Scrooge McDuck tales (including stories from such scarce originals as Mickey Mouse Almanac, Summer Fun 2, Vacation in Disneyland and others). For the first time all these legendary classics will be printed in uniform high quality with breathtaking computer color. Every volume will contain in-depth articles and special features, and will be packaged with an exclusive trading card. Albums 1-16 will be released in 1996 with the remaining twenty volumes being published in 1997 and 1998.

Anticipated cover prices will be $8.95 and $9.95, unless there are significant paper cost increases over the next three years. To protect yourself against that inflationary inevitability, become a *charter subscriber now. Just complete and mail the coupon at left. Convenient terms of three monthly payments are available.

The Carl Barks Library of Walt Disney's Uncle Scrooge Adventures in Color. It's the album series every Barks fan has been waiting for. And it's here at last!
